Stalin Warns of "Danger" But Predicts Eventual Victory

NAZIS SAY RED ARMY RESISTANCE BROKEN ALONG ENTIRE FRONT

By the Associated Press

Nazi High Command claims Red Army resistance "broken" along entire 2,000-mile front; Germans picture Russian troops engulfed in "unimaginable chaos"; Soviet war bulletin says main German drive toward Moscow is halted; vast new battle rages on Minsk-Moscow road 400 miles from Russian capital; Red Army reports "heavy defeat" inflicted on Germans in Ukraine; London hears German drives slowing up, Nazis massing for thrust at Leningrad.

Soviet Premier Stalin calls for "scorched earth" policy to help halt advancing German armies. Warns of "grave danger" but predicts eventual victory.

RAF bombs Ruhr and Rhine valleys and northwest Germany overnight; Germans continue attacks on British shipping.

United States endorses Uruguayan proposal for pledges by American republics of "constructive and practical cooperation" for defense.

Berlin, July 3—(AP)—The German High Command declared today that the resistance of the Red Army appears to have been broken and that an attack is under way on the entire front from the Arctic Ocean to the Black Sea.

The Prut river, boundary between Rumania and Sovietized Bessarabia, has been crossed by Allied-Rumanian forces driving from Moldavia, the war bulletin said, and they are advancing toward the Dnestr River.

"While hitherto, the Soviet Russian leadership apparently tried to catch the German advance near the border and start its own offensive", the communique asserted, "it now appears that resistance of the Soviet army is broken".

Official sources were unwilling today to interpret the meaning of the High Command's phrase and it was not possible to tell whether "achieving a decision of world historical importance" had reference merely to the Bialystok battle or whether it reflected the situation in the entire eastern conflict.

In reviewing action, Hitler's headquarters said that from June 22 to July 1 more than 160,000 Russians had been captured. The communique said the Russians offered stiff resistance and made desperate attempts to break out of encirclements only to lose many times as many men as those taken prisoner.

German losses were termed "gratifyingly small," but no figures were revealed.

During the same period, it was said, 5,774 tanks, 2,330 guns, four armored trains and 4,725 planes were destroyed or captured.

Although no late details were available Berlin advance units in the central sector were reported operating on the Minsk-Moscow highway. These units were reported last to have crossed the Berezina river on the way to Smolensk.

Dienst Aus Deutschland, usually well-informed commentary, told its readers the German "speed troops" were "progressing in a dash past Lwow" and that the Pripet marshes already had been left behind. These troops have as their objective, Dienst said, the Dnepr River city of Kiev, capital of the Ukraine.

Berlin sources said the Russian troops were not "evacuating" Gal-

Moscow, July 3—The vanguard of Moscow-bound German invaders was reported by the Russian High Command today to have been thrown back in repeated attempts to cross the Berezina river where in 1812 the waters were reddened by the blood of Napoleon's men under harassed retreat from the Russian capital.

Nearly 300 miles to the south of Borisov, where the battle of the Berezina centered, the Red army also was reported to have halted in "a heavy defeat" a mechanized advance toward Sheptovka, some 20 miles inside the old border of the Ukraine on the road to Kiev.

Other parts of the Ukraine invasion force were said to have attempted a break-through to the south toward Tarnopol, east of Lwow and south of Luck, still in the Ukraine's Polish buffer zone. These forces apparently had veered southward from Luck.

(Another threat to the Ukraine and its capital, Kiev—this from the southwest—appeared in a German High Command report that German and Rumanian troops finally had crossed the Prut river into Bessarabia and were driving toward the Dnster river.)

Thus, according to the latest Russian communique, two major battles raged on this 12th day of the Russian-German struggle—near Borisov. Less than 400 miles from Moscow on the Minsk-Moscow motor road, and in the Shepetovka-Tarnapol region, some 200 miles from Kiev.

It appeared that the full force of the German blitz had not yet reached the "bloody Berezina" at Borisov for the Red High Command made a point of saying only that "advanced detachments" had tried to cross the river.

(In Berlin it was said German ezina on the way to Smolensk).

Last night, the communique said, Red troops and motorized forces of the Germans fought fiercely in the Borisov area.

As for other fronts, including the Far North Murmansk sector, where the Russians claimed to have defeated about two infantry divisions attacking on the Sredni peninsula, the latest Russian communique reported only "night patrol activity and fighting of local character."

DEPUTY SHERIFF KILLED IN DAIRY FARMERS' FIGHT

Officer Riding on Milk Truck When Strikers Attempt to Halt it and Dump Contents, is Crushed Under Wheels

MANY CANS SPILLED

Rutland, Vt. July 3—(AP)—Deputy Sheriff Ray Russell of Monkton was killed today during a fight that developed when striking dairy farmers attempted to dump a truckload of milk bound for the New York market.

Russell was riding on a milk truck bound from Waltham to Vergennes when strikers attempted to halt it and dump the truckload of milk. During the fight, Russell fell from the running board and was crushed beneath the wheels of the vehicle.

Addison county authorities at once sped to the scene of the clash which occurred in a relatively thinly-populated section.

Earlier, more than 6,000 gallons of milk bound for the New York milksheds was dumped in three towns by men who halted the trucks en route to plants.

At Bridgeport, two trucks were halted and 6,000 gallons of milk dumped on the road after the drivers were halted by a barricade. Eight cans of milk were dumped from a truck making a delivery at a Fair Haven bulk plant and 12 cans were spilled on the road at Vergennes.

The dairy farmers union called a "milk holiday" in Addison and Rutland counties to withhold milk from the New York shed pending agreement in a price dispute.

The union is seeking $3 a hundredweight for blended milk, compared with a June price of $1.88.

SOLDIERS GIVEN HOLIDAY LEAVES

Indiantown Gap, July 3—(AP)—Major General Edward Martin laid plans today for moving 350 soldiers to historic Fort Necessity, near Uniontown, to participate in Independence Day exercises, while most of the reservation's remaining 14,000 men wound up training for the week and prepared for a three-day holiday.

The special detachment of troops arranged to leave camp this afternoon in 180 army trucks for a quick trip over the Pennsylvania turnpike to the Fayette county community.

The troops, many of them residents of western Pennsylvania, plan to bivouac at Fort Necessity

CHANGE IN TRAINING ACT URGED

General George C. Marshall Suggests Draftees, Reserve Officers and National Guardsmen Be Kept In Service Longer Than One Year and Asks Removal of Restrictions Which Confine Armed Forces to Western Hemisphere

BIENNIAL REPORT IS MADE TO WAR CHIEF

Washington, July 3—(AP)—General George C. Marshall, army chief of staff, urged today that draftees, reserve officers and National Guardsmen be kept in service longer than one year and asked removal of restrictions which confine the United States armed forces to the western hemisphere.

In a biennial report to Secretary of War Stimson, Marshall said that events of the "past few days are even more forcible indications of the suddenness with which armed conflict can be spread to areas hitherto considered free from attack."

"There are," he added, "legal restrictions on the use of the armed forces which should be removed without delay. x x x

"It is urgently recommended that the War Department be given authority to extend the period of service of the selective service men, the officers of the reserve corps and the units of the National Guard."

The selective service act called for a maximum of one year of military training for these groups. The act also stipulated that these groups could not be used outside the western hemisphere.

Although Marshall called only for removal restrictions regarding temporary personnel, such as the selectees and guardsmen, a War Department official said the re-

RAF CONTINUES CROSS CHANNEL DAYLIGHT RAIDS

London, July 3—(AP)—Masses of British planes, keeping up the RAF's day and night assaults on Germany and Nazi-occupied territory, launched what appeared to be another major daylight attack across the channel today.

While fighter planes scoured the air and water to clear the way, British bombers sped over northern France following up overnight attacks which the Air Ministry said were concentrated on the German cities of Cologne, Duisberg and Bremen.

Coast watchers said the raids were continuing throughout the afternoon in an "almost endless procession" of planes roaring across to the occupied French and

Pennsylvania Counts Damage Running Into Thousands of Dollars in Wake Of Electrical Storms that Break Six-Day Heat Wave

DEATH TOLL IS 18

By the Associated Press

Pennsylvania counted damage running into thousands of dollars today in the wake of electrical storms that broke a six-day heat wave fatal to at least 18 persons.

Temperatures that soared to new highs in some sections fell as much as 20 degrees as rains preceded a low pressure area into to state late yesterday. Forecasters said cooler weather would continue during the July fourth weekend and possibly longer.

The eastern section of the state bore the brunt of electrical storms, some damage was caused in the southeastern section. Scattered showers were reported in the west.

Lightning fired a new barn on the farm of the Meadowbrook Dairy Company, two miles east of Pottstown, the flames sweeping through the building, several adjoining sheds and two silos. Damage was estimated at $20,000.

Pleasant sleep was possible in Philadelphia last night for the first time in a week as rain pushed the thermometers down to 78 within a half hour. Harrisburg's .18 inch shower dropped the mercury from a high 96 to 75.

A maximum 98 was recorded at York, where John Benson, Washington, D. C., was overcome while at work on a construction project and died. Other fatalities attributed to the weather were Miss Anna Doerr, 74, Philadelphia; William Brauning, 39, and Andrew

URUGUAY PROPOSAL ENDORSED

United States, Holding That "The Safety of the Americas Hangs in the Balance" Whole-heartedly Sanctions the Suggestion That 21 Republics Exchange Specific Pledges Of "Constructive Cooperation"

REPLY IS PUBLISHED BY STATE DEPARTMENT

Washington, July 3—(AP)—The United States, holding that "the safety of the Americas hangs in the balance today," whole-heartedly endorsed the proposal of Uruguay that the 21 American republics exchange specific pledges of "constructive and practical cooperation" for defense.

The endorsement carried an appeal to the other republics to subscribe to the proposal because the western hemisphere was facing a threat of "aggression without comparison in history."

Under the Uruguayan proposal, submitted to all hemisphere republics by Foreign Minister Guani on June 21, the nations would pledge themselves not to "treat as a belligerent any American country which, in defense of its own rights, should find itself in a state of war with nations of other continents.

(The practical effect of all the republics uniting in such a policy of benevolent neutrality would be that the United States—if it became involved in war with the Axis—could utilize the naval bases, airfields and other defense facilities of South and Central American nations.

JAMES CHOOSES SITE FOR NEW STATE MANSION

Harrisburg, July 3—(AP)—Governor James has picked for the new executive mansion a site "only a 35-cent cab fare" from downtown Harrisburg hotels.

"My choice must be approved by the General State Authority Board," said James who signed yesterday a bill authorizing the construction.

"It'll be a 35-cent cab fare and a 35-minute walk from the hotels," the governor said.

Final adoption of the location is expected by the Authority board, of which James is president, at a meeting next Wednesday.

The governor said the site provided enough ground "for a baseball game and you won't be able to hit the ball out of the lot."

He added he would keep the location to himself until the negotiations for the property are completed.

Without that secrecy, James said prices might be "jacked up" and "we don't intend to spend $75,000 to $100,000 more than it's worth."

Asked if he had found a buyer for the old mansion on the highway facing the Susquehanna river, James said jestingly:

"Yes, I'm taking an option on the place myself."

Brig. Gen. Lewis B. Hershey, Deputy Director of National Selective Service, Recommends Deferring for Present Those Men Over That Age

INSTRUCTIONS ISSUED

Harrisburg, July 3—(AP)—Pennsylvania authorities estimated today at least 660,000 men in this state will be ineligible for selective service with the nation's armed forces under the terms of the new concept which brings the age limit of conscriptees down from 35 to 28.

The state registered 1,245,000 men from 21 to 36 years of age last October when conscription started.

With congress considering a 28-year age top, Brig. Gen. Lewis B. Hershey, deputy director of national selective service, recommended deferring for the present those men over that age.

State headquarters said Hershey's order affects "50 to 55 per cent of the men registered in October" in Pennsylvania.

To meet General Hershey's orders, the state selective service headquarters sent out instructions covering every contingency to each local board. Orders to report for induction, received by those men over 28, are hereby rescinded, authorities said. In addition, local boards were advised not to accept for induction any volunteers over 28.

The state registered another 65,000 men Tuesday for conscription—principally those who became 21 years old since last October. State authorities said a national lottery probably would be held to give these registrants their draft order numbers and then they will be

Washington, July 3.—(AP)—Petroleum Coordinator Ickes announced today he would request city police and state highway patrols in the east to arrest motorists wasting gasoline by use of improperly adjusted cars and making "jackrabbit" starts.

Conservation measures to combat the predicted oil scarcity on the seaboard, Ickes said, are "going to require something more than persuasion."

GUERILLA WARFARE IS URGED

Soviet Premier Calls Upon People to Meet Advancing German Armies With A Vast 'Scorched Earth' Policy, Acknowledging Invaders Have Already Captured Lithuania, Most of Latvia, Parts of White Russia and Ukraine

SUGGESTED RULES FOR FIGHTING ANNOUNCED

By the Associated Press

Moscow, July 3—Premier Joseph Stalin called upon the Russian people today to meet the advancing German armies with a vast "scorched earth" policy and with universal guerilla warfare.

He warned his people they were menaced by "a grave danger" and acknowledged that already Adolf Hitler's legions have captured Lithuania, most of Latvia, western White Russia and part of the western Ukraine.

But, he cried, it was recognized at home and abroad "that ours is a just cause, that the enemy will be defeated, that we are bound to win."

Stalin, making one of his rare speeches, attributed Nazi successes thus far "to the fact that the war of Fascist Germany on the U. S. S. R. began under conditions favorable for German forces and unfavorable for Soviet forces".

Speaking in his new role as chairman of the new defense committee, Stalin laid down these rules for fighting:

"In case of a forced retreat of Red Army units, all rolling stock must be evacuated, the enemy must not be left a single engine, a single railway car, not a single pound of grain or a gallon of fuel.

"Collective farmers must drive off all their cattle and turn over their grain to the safe-keeping of state authorities for transportation to the rear. All valuable property including non-ferrous metals, grain and fuel which cannot be withdrawn must without fail be destroyed.

"In areas occupied by the enemy, guerilla units, mounted and foot, must be formed, diversionist groups must be organized to combat enemy troops, to foment guerilla warfare everywhere, to blow up bridges, roads, damage telephone and telegraph lines and to set fire to forests, stores and

Governor Calls For a General Participation in Radio Program

By the Associated Press

Forecasts of fair and cool weather for Pennsylvania's July Fourth week-end added impetus to preparations today for celebrations throughout the state.

While observances in various forms took shape, Governor James called for participation in a nation-wide celebration by listening to a radio broadcast by President Roosevelt planned in conntion with civilian defense.

The chief executive called on Pennsylvanians "to rededicate themselves to a priceless cause and heritage of liberty" by joining in singing the Star Spangled Banner and repeating the oath of allegiance during the ceremonies scheduled for 4 p. m. (EST) tomorrow.

Defense, keynote of the Independence Day feets, will keep many Pennsylvanians at their jobs. For the first time on record steel workers at Pittsburgh will pass up the holiday to turn out materials for Uncle Sam's preparedness program. At least 2,000 southwestern Pennsylvania soft coal miners also will continue digging to supply defense needs despite a five-day vacation in the industry.

Three hundred and fifty soldiers stationed at Indiantown Gap will participate in exercises at historic Fort Necessity near Uniontown, while more than 11,000 others will take a three-day holiday. Approximately 75 per cent of the reservation's population will get leaves.

Giant displays of fireworks, banned for private use, will highlight numerous celebrations.

WARREN IS SET FOR QUIET JULY FOURTH HOLIDAY

With no public celebration planned here tomorrow, residents of Warren will be forced to find their own form of celebrating the Independence Day holiday.

A number are planning to visit nearby cities where celebrations are being held. Many will motor to nearby summer resorts. Others will enjoy picnic parties or family reunions.

Business in general will be at a standstill here tomorrow. Banks, stores and offices will be closed throughout the day. Many of the state offices will remain closed until Monday.

The post office will be closed all day tomorrow. Only special delivery mail will be delivered. However, mail will be received and dispatched as usual.

State motor police and other agencies have issued special warnings to motorists to use extreme caution on the highways over the holiday week-end in order to avoid accidents. Motorists have been advised to stay off detoured routes as much as possible and to start home early from trips in order to avoid congestion on the highways.

The weather report for the holiday indicates occasional showers in this section, with little change in temperature.

Oil City, Titusville, Indiana, Greensburg and Johnstown are among the western Pennsylvania cities which are having community celebrations.

At Oil City the program will include flag raising, baseball, a water carnival, fireworks and vaudeville. Titusville's program includes a program of sports, a parade, rodeo show, band concerts, patriotic motion pictures and a patriotic meeting with F. Clair Ross, state auditor general, as the speaker.

HARRISBURG ROBBER KILLED BY OFFICER

Harrisburg, July 3.—(AP)—A man fleeing after slugging an elderly woman en route to a hospital for treatment and robbing her of her purse was shot dead here early today by Officer Patrick Taylor, Dauphin County Coroner Earl H. Grim said.

He identified the man as Make (Slick) Scott, 43, Harriburg, a former WPA worker. Grim said that Scott struck Mrs. Cora Curns, 67, with a home-made blackjack and her screams brought Taylor who fired once when the man attempted to flee.

Mrs. Curns was taken to a hospital for treatment of bruises on her right arm.

TODAY IS LAST FOR SHEFFIELD MILL OF C. P. L.

Sheffield, July 3—Barring a breakdown of machinery at the Central Pennsylvania Lumber Company mill here today, the end of lumber manufacturing at the local plant and by the company itself will occur sometime late this afternoon, when the final leg of the hundreds of thousands milled at the plant since it was placed in operation over 33 years ago will be sawed.

The last truckloads of logs were hauled from the woods and dumped into the mill pond Tuesday, the trucking crews working overtime until 9 p. m. to complete the job. To assure completion of sawing operations today, the mill yesterday was operated 10 hours, two more than usual, and will be operated overtime again today if necessary.

In addition to being the death knell of what for so many years has been Sheffield's largest industry, "sawing out" at the local plant today means the end also of the Central Pennsylvania Lumber Company as a lumber manufacturer, inasmuch as the mill here is the last remaining one of the several the company has owned and operated down through the years.

A summary of the company's local and total operations will appear in a subsequent issue of the paper.

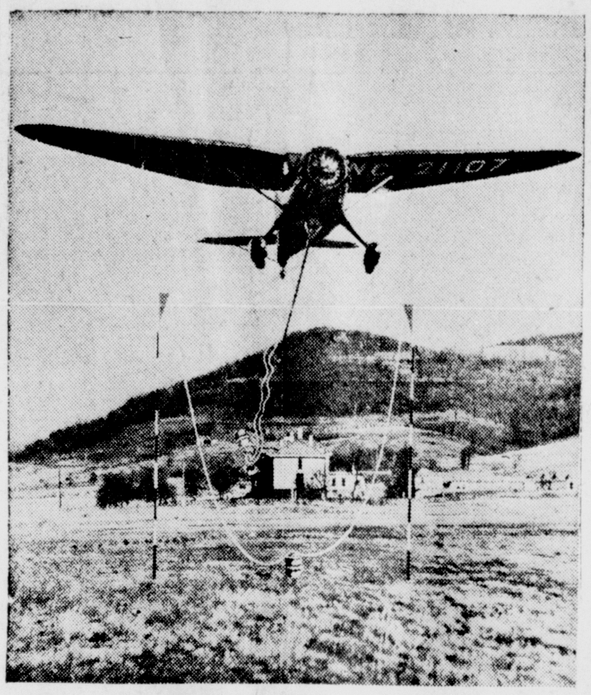
New Courier of the Airways



Latest postal facility is the air pick-up system by which airmail is picked up and delivered by airplane in flight. System which is operated by all American Aviation Inc. now serves 109 cities in West Virginia, Kentucky, Pennsylvania, Ohio, New York, and Delaware. Needing no airports, the air pick-up literally has brought direct airmail service within reach of every town in the country.

The new system for picking up and delivering air mail and air express by airplane in flight which has been developed by All American Aviation, Inc., will be placed in operation Monday, July 14, on the company's air pick-up route between Philadelphia and Pittsburgh via Harrisburg and 24 other intermediate points, and on its route between Pittsburgh and Jamestown, N. Y., which serves 13 intermediate points.

Air pick-up service will be inaugurated on the same day to Williamsburg, Portage and Blairsville on the Philadelphia-Pittsburgh route, and to Slippery Rock and Youngsville on the Pittsburgh-Jamestown route.

When service begins at these five points, the All American's air pick-up system will be in full operation. This system comprises five routes which cover 109 cities and towns in Pennsylvania, Delaware, West Virginia, Ohio, New York and Kentucky. Air mail and air express service is provided by the air pick-up to all these places on two schedules a day, one in the morning and one in the afternoon, giving them overnight connections by air to and from every other airline point in the country

The ground equipment for the new system featuring a portable station that is assembled and dismantled before and after each pick-up, instead of a fixed station, has been installed at all places on the two lines and practically everything else is in readiness for the change-over. The system already is in operation on All-American's other three routes.

PLAY AREAS OF BORO ARE GIVEN NEW FLAG POLES

Work has been completed this week on the erection of new flag poles at each of the five borough playgrounds and through the courtesy of Dinsmoor-Schwing Post, No. 631, Veterans of Foreign Wars, flags have been provided, it was announced today.

Each of the poles is 30 feet high. They are painted aluminum and make a very attractive appearance. By means of a hinged bolt, the poles can be raised or lowered if repairs or painting are needed. The flags are 5 by 9½ feet in size.

Flag raising ceremonies will be held by the kiddies at the various playgrounds each morning and this part of the daily program is expected to have its educational as well as citizenship values.

Local playground officials today expressed appreciation to the V. F. W. post for its cooperation in providing flags.

OUR FLAG

There's a fragment of His night sky
In its field and clustered stars.
There's a segment of His rainbow
In its alternating bars;
In its peerless folds are nestled
A sovereignty sublime
And a fervency for freedom
That will bide all human time.

SPRINKLERS AT YLAYGROUNDS OF BORO ENJOYED

With the installation of sprinkler systems at the local playgrounds, the kiddies of the borough may further enjoy their play hours on these extremely warm days.

The sprinklers are of the shower type, the same as used in all large city parks. They throw a 30-foot spray from their cross-arms.

All children who have not used the sprinklers are invited to visit the playgrounds and use this enjoyable part of the equipment as much as they wish, park officials said today.

It has been announced that one of the sprinklers will be installed at the Lacy playground within the next few days.

All sprinklers have been installed through the courtesy of the Warren Water Company, which deserves much credit for helping make the local playgrounds more enjoyable. The company installed the sprinklers and is furnishing the water during the season without cost to the borough.

Another of Warren's more popular attractions is the wading pool with its sprinkler system at the South Side playground. The pool, provided through the efforts of the Seneca Parent-Teacher Association and Warren Lodge, No. 223, B. P. O. Elks, was opened last week and is again popular with the kiddies of the borough. A bronze plate showing the donors of the pool has been imbedded in one corner.

THURSDAY, JULY 3, 1941

LOOKING BACK 165 YEARS AGO

Now it is the Fourth of July again, and for those in this community who elect to remain at home the holiday will be one of extreme quiet. In such an atmosphere we turn to the memory of the day when the American colonies declared their independence of Great Britain and became an independent nation.

President Roosevelt urges the American people to rededicate themselves on the Fourth to "defend and perpetuate those inalienable rights which found true expression" in the Declaration of Independence.

Let us not look back at that day in 1776 through a rosy haze or historical fuddlement. When the bell rang in Philadelphia on that hot July day it was no signal for one great unanimous upswelling of joy. More than a year of war already lay behind the struggling colonies when Hancock wrote his bold signature; nearly seven more years of bitter struggle lay ahead.

It was no exercise in literary composition, that declaration, it was a decision. It was a decision of value only as it was made to stick with a cement of grit and blood.

The country was by no means unanimous in the decision, any more than it is unanimous in decisions that are being made today.

Many wagged their heads and said "We Americans can't win," in words not unfamiliar. Others gloomily feared that the radicals were in the saddle and that even a successful separation from England would leave a country scarcely fit to live in. Some feared for their lives, some for their money and property. Some found it better business to sell their provisions and supplies to the British for gold than to the Continental Congress for depreciating paper. Some snorted at the possibility of a French alliance—was not Louis XVI a dictator and no fit company for good democrats? Some felt it would be better, cheaper in the long run, to pay unjust taxes than to fight a costly war. Some feared change itself as they felt their world slipping out from under them.

Oh, they were not all heroes then, those founding fathers who plunked for independence on July 4, 1776. They were about like us, good and bad, strong and weak, far-visioned and near-sighted—and just middling. They weren't giants, they were just people like us, with their personal problems, likes, and dislikes. But in the end they faced their crisis and they saw it through. When the time came, they decided, and having decided, they allowed neither domestic dissidents nor foreign enemies to stop them.

That is the one thing to remember about the forebears whose Declaration of Independence we celebrate tomorrow. They wanted a world in which they could breathe the air freely. They went out and got it.

In this year of world turmoil it would be well if parents would relate to their children some of the history of the country. Tell the youngsters what the men and women of colonial days suffered and endured, so that we, their successors, should have freedom, education and happiness. Let us enjoy July Fourth with a feeling of gratitude, that we had such noble ancestors who did such grand things that we might live the "American way" in this year, 1941.

FOUR RULES FOR A SAFE FOURTH

(Suggested by the National Safety Council)

First—Don't use fireworks.

Second—Take it easy on the road. Start in time. Don't speed or take chances in passing especially on hills or curves.

Third—Don't overdo in exercise, eating or exposure to sun.

Four—If you swim: Don't go in alone or when overheated. Wait an hour after eating. Know the depth of the water. Don't show off or indulge in horseplay.

That accident in Madison avenue last evening, which could easily have resulted more seriously, emphasizes the need of more caution on the part of bicycle riders in the borough.

Scores of tourist parties will be passing through Warren the next few days. Don't forget to help make them feel welcome.

Don't forget to hang out Old Glory tomorrow!

Fourth of July Piece

• EDSON'S WASHINGTON COLUMN

BY PETER EDSON
Times-Mirror Washington Correspondent

Washington, July 3—Sooner or later there will have to be a showdown in the Department of Agriculture between SMA and AAA, which are really a lot differenter than the Tweedle twins, Dum and Dee.

In case you're not up on your Washington code talk, SMA is Surplus Marketing Administration and triple-A is Agricultural Adjustment Administration. Or, if these things are meaningless unless presented in terms of personalities, SMA is Milo Perkins and AAA is Rudolph M. Evans. These two gentlemen speak to each other and might even be called pals, but the organizations they head operate on two different philosophies and there's the rub.

SMA's function is to remove price-depressing surpluses of farm products not covered by AAA. SMA buys the surpluses at the lowest possible prices, takes them off the market, sells them for export, or distributes them to the states for relief of the poor.

AAA monkeys only with five commodities—cotton, corn, wheat, rice and tobacco, and guarantees producers of these crops will obtain 85 per cent of the well known parity price, the "fair" price paid to farmers from 1909 to 1914 for all crops except tobacco, which has its parity based on the 1919-1929 price.

From this all-too-simple explanation, it can be seen that there is a fundamental difference in viewpoint. SMA buys at distress prices. AAA despises the idea of distress prices and guarantees high prices to the farmers who play along with its program.

Threatening to bring the conflict to a showdown is a little measure known as the Gore amendment to the Steagall bill, which has been receiving attention of Congress these last few months. The Steagall bill is a banking bill to prolong the life of the Commodities Credit Corporation, and the Gore amendment has nothing to do with banking, but that's the funny way congressmen sometimes get things done. What the amendments would provide is that no federal funds could be used to purchase agricultural products at a price which is below parity.

Now the Gore amendment may not get any place, but it is important because it is an attempt to put over a law that would apply the parity principle to crops other than the big five.

If general legislation to that effect were ever put on the books, it would do all sorts of things. It would give the farmers higher prices for everything they raised, which would be nice for the farmers, but it would unquestionably raise the cost of living for others. And it would wreck the operations of the Surplus Marketing Administration, as well as other federal activities like the Commodities Credit Corporation and even the food stamp plan.

It would mean that whenever the government went into the market to buy surpluses for relief or for export, it would have to pay full parity prices on everything, prunes as well as potatoes. Currently, it would raise the price of all commodities which the government is buying for aid to Britain under the lease-lend act, meats, poultry and dairy products, on which the government has asked farmers to step up production. It would cost taxpayers no telling how many more millions of dollars.

Inspiration for this idea of applying the parity principle to all farm products not just the big five, now stems principally from the American Farm Bureau Federation which has been advocating full parity for everything for years. In the last election, AFBF went whole hog for Willkie because its leaders thought Roosevelt wasn't giving enough necouragement to

A Washington Daybook

By JACK STINNETT

WASHINGTON—Some folks here are perturbed about the possibilities of a traffic jam on the highways of the air. The other day a delegation called on the President and urged him to appoint an "air control coordinator," a sort of traffic cop of the air, with broad powers to regulate traffic even to the point, if necessary, of grounding private flying in army and navy maneuver areas.

Trying to get anything official on the situation is like trying to pull teeth with eyebrow tweezers. On both sides of the fence, authorities are afraid of touching off a powder keg. There are more than 30,000 airplanes of all types in the country today. About 17,000 of these are private and commercial planes. There are tens of thousands of pilots. Add a few million pasengers and you have some idea of the persons affected by any regulations or curtailment of private flying.

On the other hand, it was realized that the army and navy must have some priorities in the skyways even before the Civil Aeronautics Board came out of its huddle recently and established a ceiling of seventeen thousand feet above sea level for all commercial and private aviation. Above that the skies belong to the army and navy. The board added the further regulation that all planes not equipped with two-way radios and sensitive altimeters must stay within 3,500 feet of the ground.

THIS caused a little easier breathing in those aeronautical circles that feared the appointment of a traffic cop for the skyways would wreck the private flying as well as the civilian pilot training program—that vast reservoir out of which the army and navy are drawing so many of their flying cadets. Whether it is a complete solution remains to be seen.

It doesn't eliminate one of the army's chief grouches, namely that secret air maneuvers are handicapped by civilian flying. A secret maneuver can't very well be secret if the army has to notify dozens of airport dispatchers just what it plans to do and when.

It is believed, however, that stratification of traffic on a 30,000-mile skyway network will simplify matters not only for the flyers but for those men who keep the radio beams buzzing in the nation's 400 range stations.

HOW the whole thing started isn't positive, but in recent weeks a lot of stories have been drifting into Washington about congestion as a result of military aviation. One such was that of a kittenish army pilot, tail man in a formation flight, had decided to practice an Immelman turn on the tail of a cross-country airliner. Apparently, the fellow didn't come close, but it was near enough to scare the daylights out of a few passengers. Another report was that an army pilot, given the all clear to land his high speed fighter plane on a midwestern port, hit the runway just as a student flyer was taxiing his little plane across the field. The army pilot had to spin his plane and rip off a wing to avoid a collision. These stories were numerous and undoubtedly gave rise to the fact that something should be done.

ANY mention of a traffic jam on the highways of the air at this point, however, is especially amusing in view of what Charles Stanton, deputy administrator of the Civilian Aeronautics Authority, once told me.

"Our program and our plans here are not just aimed at next week or even next year. We are looking forward to the day when the United States will have 300,000 to 500,000 airplanes. That's just about one plane for every 60 autos, which certainly isn't too much to expect. On that basis, within a 25-mile radius of New York City, there would be 50,000 planes. And when that time comes, we will be ready to handle the situation without any complications."

So these are just the horse and buggy days of aviation.

The First July Fourth As It Would Be Reported Today

As We Would Report It

COLONIES PROCLAIM FREEDOM

Congress Approves Final and Complete Break With Britain

If there had been daily newspapers and leased wire services in 1776, the big headlines at colonial breakfast tables on the morning of July 5 would have been over a dispatch from Philadelphia, where the Continental Congress was in session. The Congress had taken a drastic move. Here is an AP Feature Service writer's version of how it would have been reported if present-day news - gathering and distributing facilities had existed.

Philadelphia, July 4, 1776—The Continental Congress late today adopted a "declaration of independence".

The document proclaims to the world that the colonies have broken all ties with Great Britain and have become the 13 free and independent United States of America.

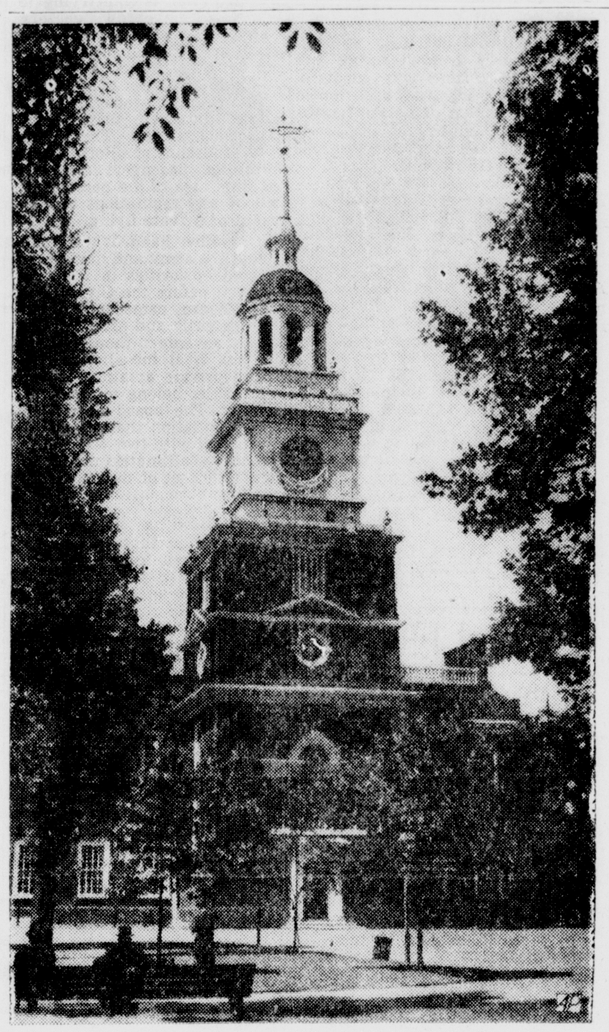
Approval came after two days of debate as to its wording, held behind closed doors in the scandalously expensive State House of Pennsylvania. (It cost $28,000 to build.) The windows were open, however, and in streamed swarms of flies from a nearby livery stable to assail the silk-stockinged legs of the perspiring delegates.

The complete break with Britain coincides with the receipt of dispatches saying that British General Howe has landed a large army of Redcoats on Sandy Hook and is marching on New York city.

The declaration ratifies and puts into specific form the action taken by Congress on July 2 when it passed the independence resolution introduced by Virginia's handsome Richard Henry Lee.

The document, written by scholarly "Long Tom" Jefferson, 33-year-old freckled-faced delegate from Virginia, sets forth that "governments are instituted to secure the inalienable rights of men to life, liberty and the pursuit of happiness".

It goes on to say that "whenever any government becomes destructive of these ends, it is the right of the people to alter or abolish it and to institute new government, laying its foundations on such principles . . . as shall seem most likely to effect their safety and happiness."



In 1776 the Pennsylvania State House was a symbol of extravagance in public building. It cost $28,000. On July 4 that year the building was the scene of events which brought new fame and a new name—Independence Hall. This is how the building appears today.

The declaration asserts that the states "have full power to levy war, conclude peace, contract alliances, establish commerce and do all other things that independent states may of right do."

The declaration was signed tonight by the president of the Congress, wealthy John Hancock of Massachusetts. Hancock, writing his name in large letters, said: "There, John Bull may read my name without spectacles."

Hancock's signature was attested by Charles Thomson, secretary of the Congress. The 50 odd individual members of the congress probably will sign the document at an early date.

Copies of the declaration will be sent to the several assemblies, conventions, councils of safety, and to General George Washington and the several commanding officers for reading to the continental troops. There is talk also of holding a great celebration of independence in the State House on July 8.

It seems that the bell in the tower of the State House was rung prematurely this afternoon. About 2 o'clock a boy on watch below shouted to the old bellman in the tower above: "Ring". Final approval of the declaration, however, was not made until this evening.

The original draft of the document as it came from the committee of five, headed by Jefferson, was amended somewhat. A notable excision was a passage charging the King with carrying on the slave trade and with refusing to allow American legislatures to suppress it.

Members contended it was inconsistent to arraign the king for doing something that some of the colonies were carrying on so energetically. During the debate Jefferson never said a word in defense of his own work, but he winced as he saw some of his most cherished phrases on liberty eliminated.

The enthusiasm displayed the day before yesterday by the oratorical, rotund John Adams of the independence resolution was still undimmed tonight.

"The second day of July will be the most memorable epoch in the history of America," said Adams. "I am apt to believe that it will be celebrated by succeeding generations as the great anniversary festival."

Delegate Abraham Clark, of New Jersey, said, "Our Congress is an august assembly, and can they support the declaration now on the anvil, they will be the greatest assembly on earth."

That Clark, however, is somewhat dubious over the outcome of today's action is indicated by the fact that he told a colleague he didn't know whether his title would turn out to be "honorable" or "dishonorable".

"Perhaps," he said, "our Congress will be exalted on a high gallows. The issue of the war will settle it."

McPHERRAN SYSTEM ALLOWS A 'SAVE' ON LAYDOWN GAME

BY WM. E. McKENNEY
America's Card Authority

Some months ago I wrote a series of articles on the McPherran no trump convention. At the national tournament in Asbury Park in August, the young star, Robert Pherran, will be found playing this convention with one or two favorite partners.

While dangerous for the inexperienced, the convention has a lot of possibilities. McPherran can be expected to make a good showing at Asbury Park.

Today's hand is a "type 2" hand for the McPherran no trump bid, a hand with little defense but one fair "out" suit. McPherran, sitting South, opened with one no trump. West doubled in order to force North and South to disclose which type of hand the no-trumper was. North redoubled, of course, showing real honor trick strength. Over two clubs McPherran bid his heart suit, anticipating that it might be necessary to save against an adverse game bid.

This very situation came about. It is interesting to note the effect of the McPherran convention in the result. At most tables North doubled four spades. South had no occasion to rescue, since in most cases South passed originally and his entry into the auction later did not guarantee any defensive strength. Still, it is only natural for the North player to hope that South will furnish some strength on defense.

McPherran's partner, however, knew from the "Type 2" opening bid that it would be folly to count on South for any defensive strength. At the same time, the assurance that McPherran had at least six hearts made the save at five hearts seem a safe gamble, as it was. McPherran was set only one trick, whereas four spades was a laydown.

SERVICE TO GAME BRINGS VANDERBILT WETZLAR TROPHY

There is one trophy in bridge which cannot be won. It is awarded each year by the Wetzlar committee to a man who has been outstanding in the game. This year the Wetzlar trophy was won by Harold S. Vanderbilt, who introduced contract into the United States in 1925.

Vanderbilt is chairman of the laws committee of the Whist Club of New York, which has always prepared the laws for rubber bridge. He is also the donor of the Vanderbilt Cup, the trophy awarded to the winners of the national knockout team-of-four championship, and of course he is the originator of the Vanderbilt bidding system.

This system incorporates an artificial club bid to show a hand containing about three and one-half honor tricks. Partner is forced to respond and any response other than one dimamond shows about two tricks. Here is an example of the use of the Vanderbilt club convention.

Despite his long strong club suit, North must not bid two clubs over the conventional club bid by South. He must respond with one diamond, to show less than two honor tricks. But having done this duty, he is entitled to make a jump takeout over one no trump.

South realizes at once, after hearing the diamond response, that North cannot hold two aces. Therefore a slam appears impossible, and South must put on the brakes no matter how strongly North bids. If North has one ace and a void, he must make up his own mind about the slam. Hence, over four clubs South is careful not to indulge in any slam try such as four no trump.

It is too difficult to stop at the right contract of five after a slam try. The simple raise to five clubs says, "As you won't agree to stop at three no trump, I will play five clubs, but I can't propose any higher contract."

Let's have a "SAFE AND SANE" 4th ... 5th and 6th

A FEW YEARS BACK America concentrated on the idea of a "Safe and Sane Fourth of July". Through the earnest effort of public-spirited citizens, and law enforcement agencies ... the children of America are far safer on Independence Day.

We've saved the children from their own carelessness. Now let's have a "safe and sane" 4th, 5th and 6th of July on the highways!

Over this three-day Independence Day weekend . . . let's make a real start toward reducing the holiday toll on Pennsylvania highways. It can be done if you do your part. Before you start anywhere, be sure your car is in good mechanical condition . . . that its brakes, tires and lights are in perfect trim. On your way . . . there and back . . . drive carefully, courteously, completely in control of your car every split-second!

Watch for children on the roads . . . going on picnics . . . playing ball. Keep under fifty . . . and keep on your own side of the road at all times. Allow plenty of time for your trip. You know now that traffic will be heavy . . . so plan now to start early . . . to use the less-travelled roads wherever and whenever possible.

Want a build-your-own-personality frock? A style that's simple enough for daytime wear with a trim hat; soft enough for dress up evenings with a frou-frou bonnet? Here's the answer in Pattern 4681, a design that's typically Anne Adams in individual style and easy making. The front and back paneling of the dress together with the high-placed, double-scalloped front seam give you divinely slim, smooth lines everywhere. Above the seam the bodice panels are soft-cut and gathered, with more gathering below the curving, graceful yokes. An optional feature is a self-fabric or ribbon belt. You might try the front panels in bold contrast for a dramatic effect.

Pattern 4681 is available in misses' and women's sizes 12, 14, 16, 18, 20, 30, 32, 34, 36, 38 and 40. Size 16 takes 3⅞ yards 39 inch fabric.

Eleanor Jean Baxter and Alfred W. Mullhaupt United in Quiet Wedding at the Bride's Home

In a simple service read at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Harry R. Baxter, 111 West street, at 6:30 o'clock last evening, their daughter, Eleanor Jean, became the bride of Alfred W. Mullhaupt, son of Mr. and Mrs. John Mullhaupt, 207 Frank street.

Dr. Thomas E. Colley, pastor of the First Methodist church, performed the ceremony, the vows being taken before banked ferns and summer flowers. The double ring service was used.

Miss Charlotta Erickson, aunt of the bride, played a 15-minute recital of lovely bridal music and the traditional wedding music. Just before the ceremony, she played "At Dawning" by Cadman and "O Perfect Love" by Barnby. While the ceremony was being performed, she played softly the Brahms "Berceuse", "Song to the Evening Star" by Wagner and "Traumerei" by Schumann.

The bride's floor length gown was of taffeta in a light blue shade and sandals were of gold color. Her lovely arm bouquet was of larkspur and delphinium in shades of blue.

She was given in marriage by her father and attended by Miss Genevieve Lagerblad. The maid of honor's long frock was of aqua taffeta, with which she wore silver slippers, and larkspur and delphinium formed her corsage.

William Brader was best man for Mr. Mullhaupt.

About 40 relatives and close friends were invited for the reception which followed immediately in the home. Appointments for the bride's table were carried out with baskets of hydrangeas, delphinium and pink roses. White candles flanked the three-tiered wedding cake which was topped with a miniature bridal couple.

For receiving, the bride's mother wore blue flowered crepe and a corsage of yellow roses with white spray.

For a wedding trip to Harrisburg and Washington, D. C., Mrs. Mullhaupt chose an ensemble of black and white, with white accessories. They will be at home after July 7 at 215 Pennsylvania avenue, east.

Both young people are graduates of the local high school, the bride having been employed by the G. C. Murphy Comany since June commencement, and Mr. Mullhaupt, member of the Class of 1938, having employment at Struthers-Wells.

The bride-elect has been complimented by her mother and sister, Mrs. Everett Hagberg; Miss Lagerblad and Miss Marcia Baxter; Mr. and Mrs. Emerson Baxter.

Baptist Pastor Delivers Excellent Address For Conservatory's Annual Commencement

Dr. James A. Davidson, pastor of the First Baptist church, speaking last evening at the 35th annual commencement exercises of the Warren Conservatory of Music, delivered a timely and interesting address on the advantages of American life and the thankfulness with which citizens of this country should view our excellent system of democracy.

The speaker praised this country's advantages in education, religion and the arts and expressed the hope that everyone will fully appreciate these wonderful opportunities.

The exercises were attended by a fair-sized audience and program numbers were thoroughly enjoyed.

Following the invocation by Dr. Davidson, Margaret Blick, senior, played with very good expression the York-Bowen "Nocturne." Betty Foster, another member of this year's class, offered the Porter "Prelude in D Minor", exhibiting a fine positive grasp of requirements for this stately composition.

Roger Webster was accompanied by Edith Haines Kuester for two pleasing baritone solos, singing with fine dramatic effect the German "Big Steamers" and displaying a splendid tone, good poise and dignity in Griffes "Eldorado."

Martha Hultberg, third graduate for this term, chose Lecuona's "Malaguena" and brought to it a good technique coupled with great power and brilliancy.

A vigorous manner especially befitting the first movement of the Vivaldi Concerto was shown in the playing of James Shortt, Jr., violinist, whose accompaniments were capably played by Lillian Larsen, faculty member.

Elanore Klinestiver, completing her post-graduate work in piano, played two movements of the "Emperor" Concerto by Beethoven, showing a fine technique and adequate grasp of this great work. Miss Larsen furnished an excellent second piano part.

Dr. LeRoy B. Campbell, head of the Conservatory, presented diplomas to the graduates and Dr. Davidson pronounced the benediction.

The next recital event at the Conservatory will be on July 18, when Lillian Louise Dornheim, daughter of Rev. and Mrs. H. E. Dornheim, of Beaver Falls, will give her junior piano program. Her father is a former pastor of the First Evangelical church here and Miss Dornheim has continued her Conservatory studies.

HOW TO CONTRIBUTE

U. S. O. contributions may be made by mail to H. B. Meacham, Treasurer U. S. O., 201 Warren National Bank Bldg., or may be taken in person to headquarters of that address. Volunteer workers will be assigned to the various plants and offices, and county communities will have representatives.

A Warren resident today recalled that Arthur Guy Empey, famous World War hero and author of "Over the Top" and "First Call," was enthusiastic over the spirit of Warren citizens when he made an address here during the first World War. Empey spoke in the Library Theatre and asked for contributions to buy smokes for the soldiers. It took a Warren audience only fifteen minutes to fill two large wash tubs with bills and coins.

During the campaign, volunteer workers will make short talks in stores, offices and industries, briefly outlining the purposes of the U. S. O. In many instances, pamphlets will be distributed and an opportunity to study the U. S. O. will be given before actual contributions are asked for.

Warren is among the localities which got away to a late start in the U. S. O. campaign, but in those centers which have completed their work or have reached the midway mark, committee report gratifying success, and this county's response to the plea is expected to equal or better the standards already set.

Five German fighters were reported authoritatively to have been bagged at a cost of three British planes in the sweep over northern France before noon.

The night attack on Bremen, often-bombed German port and ship-building center, was called particularly heavy.

Four British bombers were reported missing.

In addition to these attacks docks at Cherbourg and oil storage tanks at Rotterdam also were bombed, the British said.

Considerable resistance from German fighters and anti-aircraft defenses was said to have been surmounted by the British planes.

transports.

"In occupied regions conditions must be made unbearable for the enemy and all his accomplices. They must be hounded and annihilated at every step and all their measures frustrated."

The speech, broadcast at 6 a. m. (10 p. m. Wednesday EST) and repeated at intervals during the day on public loudspeaker systems and on house radios, marked the first time the Russian people had heard Stalin's voice since 1936 when he announced the constitution.

Asserting that "millions of the masses of our people will rise," Stalin, speaking in measured tones, announced that workers in Leningrad and Moscow already had started the organization of thousands into peoples' armies to support the Red Army and urged similar action in "every city under threat of invasion".

He expressed gratitude to Britain and the United States and referred to the people of Europe and America as "loyal allies".

"Our war for the fredom of our country," he said, "will merge with the struggle of the peoples of Europe and America for their independence, for democratic liberties. x x x"

Broadcasting only a short time after a Red Army communique acknowledged that Nazi spearheads were less than 400 miles from Moscow, Stalin declared that "history shows that there are no invincible armies and never have been." He recalled that Russians once beat Napoleon.

He told his people that it was Hitler who had broken the non-aggression pact between Russia and Germany but that the signing of it was not an error on the part of the Soviets. In the first place, he said, Russia in love of peace could not turn down a treaty even when offered "by such fiends and cannibals as Hitler and Ribbentrop".

In the second place, he continued, it gained Russia year and half "opportunity of preparing its forces to repulse Fascist Germany should she risk an attack on our country despite the pact".

New York, July 3—(AP)—The German radio commenting today on Soviet Premier Stalin's morning address said "the speech of the Russian dictator has a striking resemblance to a speech of the French Premier Reynaud when the German forces had broken through the Maginot line".

The comment was heard by CBS. "x x x The simple fact that Stalin saw it necessary personally to go to the microphone," the German radio said, "is a clear indication of how nervous the Kremlin is today."

HEARTBREAK HONEYMOON

by WATKIN[illegible]

YESTERDAY: It was too good to last. Luella and Henry Pell just have been married, and just have settled in a charming New York apartment, while Henry settles himself in his new and very good job. And then Marie Mason calls up, and asks that they hear her broadcast, Marie being the hometown girl that Henry almost married. Now they have met Marie after her broadcast, and Luella is thinking about former days.

Chapter Six

Sixty-Five Floors Up

MARIE kissed Luella, and she kissed Henry, while a lot of people looked on with amused interest.

"Gosh, Marie," said Henry in a breathless fashion, "you were great! Boy, was I proud of you!"

"So was I," said Luella. "But I kept thinking about the time you sang a solo in the Methodist church choir and forgot your words. Remember?"

"Yes, I remember," said Marie. "But there's no time for reminiscing."

"And the time," said Luella, "when you forgot to take off your apron, and there it was when you got up to sing."

Marie frowned. She turned to Tommy.

"Oh, Tommy, darling, I'm sorry!" she said, catching his hand. "Luella, Henry, this is Tommy." She laughed. "Formally speaking, Mr. and Mrs. Pell, this is Mr. McIntyre."

"Hello, Luella! Howdy, Henry!" said Tommy.

"Howdy, yourself," said Henry. Then, grinning, he looked at Luella, and said, "Say, 'howdy' to Tommy, honey."

"Howdy, Tommy!" said Luella.

Marie let her lovely eyes move over the three people gathered about her.

"This is one of the happiest moments of my life," she said. "My three dearest and best friends all here with me at one time! Now, let's get the elevator for the Rainbow Room. We're going to celebrate."

Tommy took Luella's arm, and Henry took Marie's, as they entered a car that shot them up toward the stars.

Sixty-five floors above the sidewalks of Manhattan, Marie demanded a table near the dance floor— and got it.

"Yes, Miss Mason," said the dignified man who met them. "Yes, Miss Mason. Right this way."

When they were seated, Tommy looked at Marie and smiled.

"Just like that!" he said. "And she gets what she wants."

"Like rubbing Aladdin's lamp," said Luella.

Marie shrugged. "In New York, my dears," she said, "one has to be demanding—or one gets lost under foot."

"Champagne cocktails for all of us," Tommy said then. "My treat—for old home week." He turned to Luella. "Oh," he said, "maybe you'd prefer something else, Luella. Marie always takes champagne cocktails, and so—"

"I've never tasted one," said Luella, "but I'm dying to."

"Then champagne cocktails it shall be!"

The waiter went away. General conversation began.

Luella could feel Tommy McIntyre's gaze upon her now and then.

He had a sort of puzzled, surprised look. "Probably expected to see a dumpy little country gal," she thought. She smiled to herself, rather liking the taste of the champagne, a beverage she had seen only in the movies.

"And so you really liked me?" Marie was saying to Henry.

"You were swell, Marie," said Henry—and Luella, hearing, had the feeling that she had heard Henry say those words at least a dozen times. "And while I watched you and listened, I kept remembering how you looked beside the river on the night when you told me you wanted a career more than anything else in the whole world. Remember?"

"Do I?" said Marie. "Of course I do."

Looking Back

AS IF she hadn't been remembering every moment of that night from the first glimpse she had got of Henry waiting for her there in New York's tall building. So handsome, so sure of himself, with his football shoulders, his narrow hips, his long straight legs, and the smile she would never forget if she lived to be a hundred and one years old.

She had rather dreaded meeting her two old friends in so public a place, not that she expected them to be boobs with hayseed in their hair, but fearful lest they be—well—not just quite right; small-townish, maybe small-townish trying to look sophisticated.

But it hadn't been that way at all. Henry was perfect, and even Luella looked a little like Park Avenue. Henry . . . Luella . . . but especially Henry.

"It was pretty decent of you, too," Henry was now saying, "to use that old song of mine. I certainly never expected to hear it sung over the radio."

"I thought you'd be pleased," said Marie. "It goes over well, too."

"Careful, Marie," Tommy warned good-naturedly. "Henry will be demanding royalties."

"Not Henry," said Marie. "He's willing for me to use it for the sake of old times. Aren't you, Henry?"

"You bet I am!" said Henry. He was flushed with excitement. "How about another round of cocktails?"

"Suits me," said Marie. "I've been a good little girl for a long time."

"I'm willing," said Tommy.

"I'll have another one too, Henry," said Luella.

Henry looked at her. "Listen, honey," he said, "don't disgrace me by landing under the table."

Luella didn't like that remark. "You watch your own likker, my darling," she retorted. "I'll take care of mine."

Tommy laughed. "Attagirl, Luella!" he cheered. "Never let a husband get the idea he can push you around."

"I'll remember that," said Marie. "In case I ever decide to marry you, Tommy, my lamb."

"There I go," said Tommy, "putting my foot in it again."

"Speaking of that song of mine," said Henry to Marie, "I've got some others. I used to write them during odd times. Maybe we can make some of them go over like the one you sang."

"We'll keep them in mind," said Marie. "I've got big plans for my radio career, and maybe some day I'll be coming to you for material."

"Say, I'd love that!" said Henry. "Maybe I can be a song writer on the side." He grinned. "You know, write songs in between selling real estate."

Tommy smiled at Luella. "Come on," he said, "let's dance."

"I'd love it," said Luella.

She would show Henry Pell he couldn't treat her like a child, turn patronizing. She'd not only dance with this good-looking young man, but she would also have as many cocktails as she chose to have.

She went to Tommy McIntyre's arms.

She was oddly lighthearted, and she liked the feeling.

They moved out upon the shining floor—she and Tommy.

"You Southern gals are jest natchul, bawn dancers, honey chile," said Tommy.

"Thank you, suh," said Luella. "You Yankee boys aren't so bad yo'selves. Ah likes dancing with you-all."

"Oh, us Yankees aren't so terrible once you get to know us," Tommy chuckled. "Although I hear that way down South you folks still think we have horns and forked tails."

"Yes," said Luella. "But that's way, way down South."

New Friend

AND somehow she began to feel that Tommy McIntyre was a very real person—sincere, sympathetic, understanding—and that in him she had found a genuine friend. She hoped so. For she had a pretty definite idea that she was going to need friends—good, solid ones.

Henry, coming in daily contact with important people down at his office, was steadily widening his circle of friends and acquaintances. But not so easy, staying alone in the apartment. And although Henry had referred to the wives of his business associates as women whom she would meet, be entertained by, and entertain, none of them had so far bothered to look her up.

Yes, she was going to need friends, and Tommy was a fine beginning.

"Why so silent, Luella?" Tommy asked. "I've always thought that you Southern girls never lacked for anything to say, that you always had a line."

"Just another false report about us," Luella replied. "Like the one about Southerners being lazy." She smiled up at him. "I was just doing some very, very feminine thinking. It wouldn't interest you in the least."

"Let me be the judge of that."

"No. . . There's no use."

"All right, lady. But I am interested in seeing more of the Pells—and often. Do you mind?"

"Goodness, gracious no!" said Luella. "I'll feel terribly if you don't see a lot of us. In fact, I'm already planning to have you and Marie up for dinner."

"One you cooked yourself?"

"Yes. How did know?"

"Oh, Marie told me about you. She said you were a little homebody, and loved to cook."

"Really?" said Luella. "Not a very flattering picture, I must say. Now I understand why you looked at me so queerly this evening."

"Did I look at you queerly?"

"You certainly did. You were probably looking for a flour smudge on my nose."

"Wrong!" said Tommy. "I was looking at you— intently but not queerly—because I was so delighted to discover a young woman who was able to cook a good meal, and yet look like something out of Vogueland when she stepped out in the evening to be gay."

Luella laughed happily.

"Tommy McIntyre, you've done me a peck of good saying that!" she said. "You've made my stock rise fifty percent—in my own estimation at least."

She glanced over her shoulder, saw Marie talking earnestly to Henry, while Henry listened with all that was in him, a sort of rapt expression on his good-looking face. "Let's go back to the others now," she said, not caring for the way Henry's and Marie's cheeks almost touched. "You really should dance with Marie, you know."

"All right, if you think so," said Tommy. He too glanced at the couple at the table. "However, Marie seems to be quite content with things as is!"

And he was right. Marie was content. That is she was content to have Henry there with her. She could not keep her feelings from showing in her eyes, nor the heartbeats from quickening when Henry's hand touched hers. Henry, seeing, understanding, did some wondering. "Good Lord," he thought, "does she still love me a little? Could I—even now—take her in my arms and kiss her?"

the full parity idea.

With Willkie's defeat some political dopesters thought AFBF was dead, but the organization went right on with its drive for full parity on the five basic crops, and what's more, put it over in what economy congressmen from non-agricultural districts call the greatest grab in the history of the American congress.

Today, the Farm Bureau Federation is rated as one of the most influential lobbies in Washington. AFBF sends telegrams to congressmen by the score, and it never misses a trick where the farmer's interests are concerned, operating on the simple philosophy that with everybody else getting something from the government, the farmer is entitled to his'n.

Its efforts tend to aid the big farmer more than the little farmer. AAA and the parity program favor the big farmer perhaps 10 to 1. SMA, Commodities Credit Corporation, Farm Securitty Administration look more towards aiding the small farmer. That's where the fundamental conflict is in the Department of Agriculture.

AMERICAN MEAT

On Jan. 1, 1940, there were approximately 145,133,000 head of meat animals on American farms and range lands. Cattle accounted for 68,769,000 of this number. The remainder included 54,473,000 sheep and 58,312,000 hogs.

Russia occupies about one-seventh of the land surface of the globe.

Dear Mom:

Well, here it is another weekend—my second in the U. S. Army—and I'm not a General yet. But give me time.

As a matter of fact, I have too much time on my hands—not on weekdays, but on evenings and weekends.

You see, the nearest village is 5 miles away. And when you get there, all you find is a general store, a garage and a canning factory—nowhere to go for any good clean fun, unless you find a smoke-filled juke joint on the way.

Well, Mom, in that connection, there's a big favor you can do me. It's about this U. S. O. drive. They're trying to raise $10,765,000 to run clubs for us, outside of camp. Places with lounge rooms, dance floors, games, writing rooms. Places you can go for a bite to eat without paying a king's ransom.

Now, I know you don't have an idle million lying around, but if you could get the family interested and some of the neighbors, and if that happened all over the country, the U. S. O. could raise $10,765,000 over night.

Besides, there are a lot of people in this country who feel we are doing our bit, and they'd like to do theirs, and this is certainly their chance.

I'd appreciate it a lot, Mom, and so would every other mother's son in the U. S. Army and Navy.

Love,
Bill.

"W's" ARRIVE

The Warren High School track and baseball letters, which were ordered nearly three weeks before the close of school for the summer, and were delayed for quite a period, have finally arrived at the high school and all players who earned their awards may call at the school any time and receive their coveted "W's," it was announced this week by Director of Athletics J. B. Leidig.

INDIANS BOUGHT IT

The federal government did not give the Cherokee Indians their reservation in North Carolina. The Indians purchased it from private owners in 1851.

ZIVIC WINS IN TENTH BY T. K. O. IN DAVIS BOUT

BY GAYLE TALBOT

New York, July 3—(AP)—Bummy Davis, the unpopular little waif from Brooklyn, can go back and tell his Army buddies in Texas that he put up a courageous fight before he bowed to Fritzie Zivic last night at the Polo Grounds.

In fact, the ringside regulars were trying to remember any boxer who had absorbed a worse licking in a local ring just before Bummy finally sagged against the ropes in the 10th round and signified that he had taken enough.

Bummy's face was smeared with blood and he was helpless, his head and body being torn by the machine gun punches of the welterweight champion, when Referee Arthur Donovan called it off.

Zivic did an artistic job, taking full revenge for the foul shots that Davis poured into his trunks at their first meeting last November. It was so one-sided that the crowd began moving out before the scrap was half over. That is unusual for an audience that has paid up to $11.00 for a ringside chair.

All Davis had was a left hook, and he was helpless in the clinches. Zivic, who had waited eight months for another chance at Bummy, had just about everything, including a left jab that was in Bumy's face all night.

In the first round Zivic caught Bummy wide open and chopped him to the canvas with a right to the jaw. The count had reached seven when the bell rang to end the round and gave Bummy another chance. Otherwise it might have ended right then. Zivic never knocked his man down again, but what he did was worse, probably.

Round after round he jabbed, jabbed Bummy in his swollen face, taking practically nothing in return. Only one round was credited to Davis, and that was based more or less on the law of reasonable doubt. Zivic looked like a great fighter.

The disappointing crowd of 8,868 paid a gross of $36,185.

Veto Greto, fifteen year old youngster, hurled the St. Joseph's Boys' Club to a victory in a City League softball game last night over the K. of C. on the West Side diamond by a score of 8 to 2.

Slightly nervous at the outset, the youthful pitching ace tossed a seven hitter at the Caseys, keeping those bingles well scattered except for the first and fourth cantos when the K. of C. scored single tallies.

The Boys' Club supported Greto with two runs in each of the first two innings, one more in the third, and then they polished the job with three counters in the fifth.

The victory put the winners in second place and the losers fell into the cellar of the league.

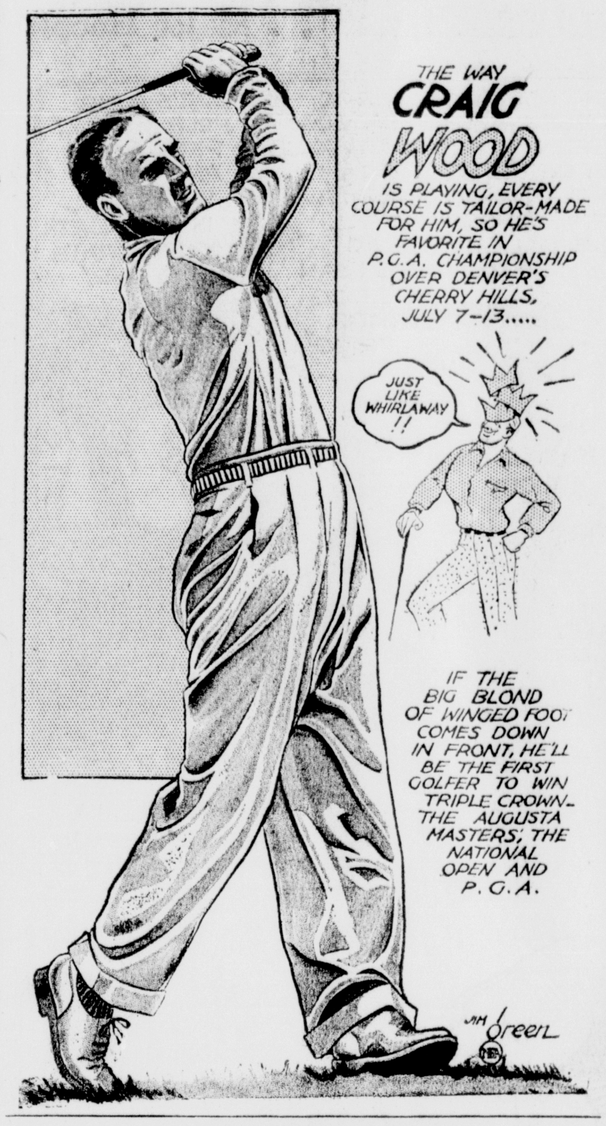
Shoots for It All



SPORT SCATTERGRAMS

Baseball, with all of its managers, front offices, players, farms, scouts, etc., seems to be going steadily money mad. It's a funny thing, too, because they call old timers who are still in the game as coaches or pilots, experts. Yet, twenty years ago who would have given five grand as a bonus to any young rookie about whom very little was known, let alone the $45,000 that Dick Wakefield and Bennie McCoy drew this year and last for signing? McCoy had experience, but he hasn't exactly shown himself to be worth that much dough. Wakefield is still a mystery—he may be good and then again he may flop. But there is no money-back guarantee to the Tigers if the rookie outfielder doesn't please, no thirty-day trial, just a gift of forty-five thousand lettuce leaves to one lucky kid who may have a dozen equals around the country, some who never will even break into the majors, and others who may, but probably not with such a pleasant debut. Then there's Johnny Gee, the biggest laugh in modern baseball when you stop to consider his price tag. Gee didn't get a bonus, but seventy-five grand was a wicked price to pay when the big Bucco pitcher hasn't earned his salt in two seasons now.

And the most comical part about the whole money angle is the annual holdouts in the spring. As the years go along, salaries keep getting bigger. This spring there was the Feller-Newsom feud as to which was the higher paid pitcher. Very few players in the major leagues are worth more than $15,000 per, and that's very good money. But if a batter hits .371 for a season when he was only expected to do about .325 or .350, he's in the front office bright and early in the spring for a salary boost. That's fine, but if the same batter who wants a bigger slice for a good season would be as quick to admit he deserves a cut following a poor campaign, baseball could once again concentrate on the game intsead of the money angle. However, it's not the players who are the fools, but the big financial guns behind them. And if you're looking for suckers these days, they're not hard to find. Just take a peek into organized baseball and you'll find a school of them.

Quickies . . . Lefty Gomez is sporting a new lid, acquired when a jubilant Yankee fan threw it away as Red Rolfe smacked a home run . . . Rookie George Archie is breaking in at third base for the Washington Nats, for who knows when Uncle Sam is going to call Buddy Lewis from the hot corner? . . . Between double-headers last Sunday, while Joe DiMaggio was breaking George Sisler's hitting mark, someone swiped his favorite bat . . . But it didn't stop the clouting DiMag . . . He used another one which he had designed and poled a hit his first time up in the nightcap . . . Out in Wenatchee, Wash., they're telling about their "real rally" in a baseball game . . . Wenatchee was trailing Tacoma 11 to 6 going into the last half of the ninth inning . . . But, starting with the head of the batting order, Wenatchee collected nine straight singles . . . Each regular—plus a pinch hitter for the pitcher—connected for a one-baser for six runs and the victory, which came with the bases still loaded and nobody out!

New York, July 3—What's this about Jimmy Foxx getting a cracked rib in a friendly wrestling match with Ted Williams in the Red Sox club house? The official announcement said Foxx received a torn cartilage when hit by a ball....But the grapevine says several of the Sox yelled "There goes the pennant," when Jimmy was pinned by Williams....Most promising girl golfer Patty Berg saw on her 50,000-mile tour was Louise Suggs of Olympia Springs, Ga.

Mebbe you notice that when Joe DiMaggio broke Willie Keeler's record of hitting safely in 44 consecutive games, it happened exactly 44 years after Wee Willie posted the mark....And Old Bill Dahlen, former Cub and Dodger shortstop, who held the record (42 games) prior to Keeler, was in the Yankee stadium to see Joe turn the trick.....

MRS. JOE LOUIS SEEKS DIVORCE FROM CHAMPION

BY EARL HILLIGAN

Chicago, July 3—(AP)—Two weeks after a dinner for which she said "I cooked everything he liked in hopes we'd patch things up," Mrs. Joe Louis has filed suit for divorce from the world's heavyweight boxing champion. She alleged extreme and repeated cruelty.

In the action, filed yesterday in circuit court, she said the famous Brown Bomber dealt her "a violent blow in the mouth with his hand" on Jan. 2, 1941, and "hit her in the face and stepped on her ankle" April 19.

"We separated after that last incident," said Mrs. Louis, the former Marva Trotter of Chicago. "But two weeks ago we had dinner together. I fixed everything he

Goodyear Wingfoots Meet Morrison Crew Tomorrow Afternoon

Sports will hold the spotlight locally tomorrow in the observance and celebration of Independence Day. There'll be golf, a little tennis, swimming, etc., but the feature sports attraction will be the Akron Goodyear-National Forge baseball game at Wilder Field, Irvine, starting at two thirty o'clock tomorrow afternoon.

The Goodyears will bring a strong outfit to Irvine to match the Forge, and the Wingfoot club is fully as capable of giving the fans a fine baseball program as were the Warren, Ohio Ramblers, who put up two fine games against the Morrison aggregation last Sunday, according to reports and records from Ohio sources.

So for all baseball fans, it's easy and convenient to trek down to Irvine for the ball game. Unless bad weather forces postponement of the contest, it can be expected to be one of the finest games presented at Irvine this season.

Tentative lineups for both teams in tomorrow's fracas are as follows:

Akron Wingfoots: Captain Mel Rush, third base; Swope, first base; Bill McNenney, shortstop; Tom Porosky, center field; Paul Carroll, left field; Ike Harwell, right field; Jack Buttermore, catcher; Bus Simpson, second base or field; and their pitching ace, Carl "Lefty" Bement, who has won six and lost two in the Greater Cleveland League in which they play, and are currently leading the circuit.

ish Guiana and installations there are far from complete. The lack of base facilities below the bulge of Brazil in time of war would sharply restricet the range of U. S. naval or air activity and make it difficult to combat any major threat to the hemisphere developing in the south Atlantic.)

The United States reply to Uruguay's proposal, made public last night by the State Department, pointed out that the United States already has pledged itself to permit the other American republics to facilities and has provided practutilize all United States defense tical financial assistance to the other American nations to aid in strengthening the continent's defense.

After citing the "black night of fear and destruction and organized murder" which has engulfed Europe the American note declared that "no country, today, is secure from this unmasked lust for power and loot which has no limit but domination of the entire world.x x

"Constructive and far sighted action now on the part of all the American republics acting together will ensure the preservation for future generations of those liberties and other blessings which our forefathers so laboriously gained."

12TH VICTIM OF DON DISASTER RECOVERED

Harpswell, Me., July 3—(AP)—Casco Bay today gave up the 12th body from the cabin cruiser Don disaster, in which 35 excursionists apparently died.

The body was identified as that of Miss Leila Sanders, of Rumford, secretary to Paul Thurston, president of the Rumford Falls Trust Company. Coast guards recovered it off Cape Elizabeth.

The lifting of a fog that had hung over the area since the tragedy enabled a plane to join boats today in searching for the missing victims.

TIMES TOPICS

BUSY JUNE FOR CUPID

During the month of June, 54 couples applied for marriage licenses, it was revealed today at the register and recorder's office. This figure is between those of 1940 and 1939. In the '40 there were only 23 licenses issued; in '39, 85 couples were victims of Cupid.

RIDGWAY MAN DIES

R. A. Cartwright, 77, prominent Ridgway business man and former burgess and councilman, died yesterday. He was associated with lumber, brick, coal and chemical interests and was one of the first to prospect for silver and gold in Canada. The funeral will be held Saturday.

COMMITS SUICIDE

Clarion County Coroner R. W. Moore reported today that 17-year-old Helen Hughes ended her life yesterday on a farm near Knox after working several hours in a hay field. The girl fired a .38 caliber bullet into her heart after apparently firing the revolver twice to test it, Moore reported. Her body was found in an upstairs room of the farm home where she lived with her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Lovic Hughes, and several brothers and sisters.

MISSION OFFICERS

Rev. Gordon A. Nelson, of Jamestown, was chosen president of the Middle East Young People's Conference during the annual business session held yesterday at Chautauqua. Among others elected were Miss Alice Swanson, of Warren, as corresponding secretary. Much of the program for tomorrow will be patriotic in nature. Today's altar service was conducted by Rev. Levi Hagberg, of Sugar Grove.

Change in Training Act Urged

strictions affected the whole army.

Selectees, this official added, have been placed in units with regular army men, to whom the restrictions do not apply, thus making the entire unit subject to the restrictive legislation.

Only a comparatively few units are composed solidly of regular army personnel.

The chief of staff also reported that there were 120,000 men in overseas garrisons, "including Alaska and Newfoundland." No details were given on the distribution of these troops.

Marshall was emphatic on the removal of restrictions on military personnel.

"When and where these forces are to serve are questions to be determined by their commander-in-chief and the congress, and should not be confused with the problem of their readiness for service," Marshall told Stimson.

"All, it is believed, will admit that the time factor has been of dominant importance in the march of events since September, 1939, in the availability of material, in the effect of the complete readiness of huge, highly trained units for employment in chosen theaters."

Marshall asserted that the 12-month service period of many now on active duty is nearly completed and asked, "Must we replace most of the trained officer personnel of a division—the leaders—at the moment of departure for strategic localities?"

"I submit," Marshall said, "that the limitations referred to should be removed as quickly as possible if we are to have a fair opportunity to protect ourselves against the coldly calculated, secret and sudden action that might be directed against us."

The chief of staff also strongly urged immediate congressional action on legislation already before congress designed to vitalize the army leadership. He said the purpose was removal from active duty of "a few officers who slow down the development of our emergency army through lack of qualities of vigor and intelligent, aggressive leadership."

Summing up his recommendations, Marshall told Stimson:

"These proposals which the war department recommends for action by congress have but one purpose, the security of the American people; to permit the development of the national defense on the orderly and businesslike basis necessary if the dangers of the present situation are to be met. Such a purpose does not admit of delay."

icia, but were being thrown out after heavy battles. Appearance of Hungarians, marching through Carpathian mountain passes into Galicia, has made the Russian position more critical, these sources said.

On the Baltic front commentators said the Germans had crossed the Dvina river leaving broken parts of Russian forces behind hopelessly trying to break out of the Riga-Dvinsk-Tilsit triangle. This meant, the commentators said, that the most difficult terrain in that area had been overcome and Nazi forces were pouring into Estonia.

In the fourth German sector—Finland—the reported crossing of German and Finnish forces into Soviet Russia "shouldn't be underestimated," political circles said.

integrated into the present system by local boards on a proportional basis.

Governmental matters affecting conscription occupied the attention of the capitol to the exclusion of legislative and departmental matters today. The legislature was in recess until Monday and the capitol prepared to shut down by nightfall for the July 4 week-end.

Developments were:

Governor James asserted he believed some of the Democratic opposition in the assembly to his plan for a "little WPA" had dissipated and expressed the hope for a final budget agreement next week, looking toward adjournment of the 1941 session which started January 7.

The executive also said he has picked out a location for the new executive mansion "only a 35-cent cab fare" from downtown Harrisburg hotels. He made the disclosure after signing a bill authorizing the expense of the project.

Governor James said he would meet with Republican leaders of the legislature Monday in his office to discuss further steps in the legislature. Whether Democratic leaders would be invited has not been determined, he said.

PLAN MONUMENT TO HONOR LONGSTREET

Gettysburg, July 3.—(AP)—Two freshly-turned spades of earth high on a wind-swept ridge of this historic Civil War battleground marked the site today of a proposed $200,000 monument to the memory of Confederate General James Longstreet.

A one-time comrade at arms, 95-year-old General Julius S. Howell, of Bristol, Va., joined with Motion Picture Actress Mary Pickford in impressive dedication ceremonies on ground where Longstreet and his men fought fiercely 78 years ago.

With them yesterday was the general's widow, one of the principal figures in two days of events honoring the famed southerner. On hand also were representatives of President Roosevelt, the Navy Department, Governor Arthur H. James and a host of state and national dignitaries.

LIST HESITATES AFTER A RALLY

New York, July 3—(AP)—Stocks turned hesitant in today's market after an early extension of yesterday's mild rally by fractions.

A few aircrafts, steels, rails, farm implements and mail orders clung to modest advances, but minus signs were plentiful near the final hour. Numerous issues were unchanged. Dealings slowed after a fairly fast opening. Transfers were at the rate of about 450,000 shares.

Ickes Offers a New Idea About Conserving Gas

Meanwhile, the coordinator announced that Secretary of Navy Knox had agreed this morning to put two of the navy's largest and fastest tankers into service moving oil from the gulf coast to the east, in an effort to ease the predicted shortage.

Ickes met today with representatives of all government agencies having anything to do with petroleum.

He gave them a report on what was being done to relieve the transportation bottleneck on petroleum delivery.

Railroad shipment of crude oil to the east will begin Monday, Ickes announced, as an outgrowth of his plea for such deliveries to ease an expected oil shortage on the seaboard.

A train of 25 tank cars will leave Lima, Ohio, July 7 bound for the Bayonne, N. J., refinery of the Standard Oil Company of New Jersey, inaugurating regular shipments between supply and refining stations.

Former Y. M. C. A. Secretary Here Dies

Reading, July 3.—(AP)—Victim of a stroke, Herbert V. Elvidge, secretary of the Reading Y. M. C. A., and widely known civic leader, died today in Rearing hospital at the age of 70.

During his life, Elvidge conducted charity campaigns in which more than $10,000,000 was raised.

Elvidge came to Reading in 1920 from Allentown to take over the post of secretary of the Reading Chamber of Commerce. He had been general secretary of the Allentown Y. M. C. A. He also had been secretary of the Warren, Pa., Y. M. C. A.

Older residents will regret to learn of the passing of Mr. Elvidge who preceded A. F. Kottcamp as general secretary of the Warren Y. M. C. A., and after whom the Elvidge Class of the First Presbyterian church was named.

VETERAN BROADWAY PRODUCER IS DEAD

New York, July 3.—(AP)—Sam H. Harris, 69, one of Broadway's most successful theatrical managers and producers, died today at his hotel apartment.

The veteran producer, a native New Yorker, was thrown on his own resources when he was 11 and within six years had organized several entertainments. He was a partner in the theatrical firm of Sullivan, Harris and Woods before combining his talents with those of George M. Cohan, the actor. The latter association lasted from 1904 to 1920, and was resumed in 1936.

Harris had been ill since undergoing an appendectomy last March in Florida.

He was married to Mrs. Kathleen Brent Watson, sister of George Brent, motion picture actor, in March, 1939.

overnight. Officers said those who live in the Pittsburgh area probably would be permitted to spend part of the weekend at their homes.

General Martin himself is listed among the principal speakers at the Fort Necessity celebration.

Approximately 75 per cent of the camp's population will be granted leaves for the three-day weekend which begins after retreat ceremonies tonight, officers disclosed.

Meanwhile, the 28th division prepared to receive its second group of selective service replacements —800 infantrymen from Camp Croft, S. C.—Sunday.

WITH OUR BOYS AT INDIANTOWN GAP

By Special Correspondence

Well, here it is time for another article and I think that this should be, by all means, dedicated to old man summer, because he really is letting us know what heat really is like and if it gets any hotter than it is right now I don't know what this soldier is going to do. The water has been running freely for the last several days and I don't mean a creek, either. It has been so hot that the fellows aren't even sleeping between sheets. They just lie on top of their bunks and suffer. Oh well, we are able to take it and regardless of how hot it gets, we will still be going strong at the end of our year down here and I don't think there will be any casualties; at least I hope not.

Last Thursday we all went through the gas school and it really is quite a sensation to know that you are really smelling the real McCoy and not some make believe gas that won't hurt you. We were all given a chance to go through the various gases in a group and they exploded a small cartridge of the gas and we would all walk through it until we got a smell of it and then you were instructed to run out of it holding your breath and after getting a safe distance from the gas concentration, you could take a deep breath, or breathe regularly again.

The different gases we were put through were as follows: A diluted form of chlorpicrin gas, Lewisite gas and mustard gas. Then we were given a full strength shot of phosgene gas. The reason for this was that this gas will lift and mix with the air so very quickly that it is impossible to get even a slight concentration of it unless given in full strength. There are some of the strangest smells connected with these various gases that I ever did smell and it is without doubt the first whiff of the most deadly of the poison gases used today that the fellows ever had.

Well, another field inspection was held and as usual the men in the organization were all in top notch shape and their equipment was very good except in a very few cases and then it was nothing serious. We hope the boys will keep right on going at the rate they are going now because it really is becoming to the company and it also shows that they still have the old fight in them that they had when they first came down here; only now it has settled down to one of determination rather than of a rookie learning new ways of life. (Apologies to the older men of the company and to those of the outfit who were up on all of these things before we came here.)

There will be fifteen men from the company in Warren this week on seven-day furlough, including yours truly. The following list of men who will be home may aid those who may wish to see them while they are in Warren.

Those on furlough now are: Sgt. William Olson, Cpl. Bernard H. Roth, Cpl. Elmer E. Springer, Cpl. Orvis E. Kinch, Cpl. Leroy C. Fronberry and Privates Forest L. Curtis, Joseph J. Cooper, William W. CanSile, William R. Brown, Kenneth W. Dunn, Robert S. Ferry, Charles E. Hopkins, Tony P. Spear, George H. Franklin and David F. Ferry.

We hope that all of the folks who wish to see these boys can do so while they are home because it really does seem good to be back among you for seven whole days and just live like you want to again (sleep in every morning).

If you see some of the boys wearing civilian clothes, don't get excited and think they have been kicked out of the service or have run away because we have received permission from the officers to wear our civilian clothes if we wish to do so.

I have been asked several times in letters who it is that writes these articles for the paper. Well, I will tell you that he is just a line corporal who has a few spare moments, and the lieutenant and I have gotten together and are writing these little articles, but as to the identity, I will let you figure that one out for yourself and if you guess right it will be O. K. by me. I'll be home on furlough this week and any suggestions you may have will be accepted gladly (if you can guess who I am). (Editor's note—If you can't guess, we will be glad to forward the suggestions.)

Our schedule this week consists mainly of inspection by brigade and general brushing up on the things we have been instructed in for so long and it will be quite a hectic week because these inspections are not exactly fun, as the fellows who have been in the service or are in the service know only too well.

Here is the full schedule for the week:

Monday—Tactics of a platoon, tactics of a company.

Tuesday—Tactics of a platoon, individual infantry soldier, tactics of a squad, technique of fire, tactics of a squad and platoon.

Wednesday—Brigade training inspection (see paragraph below), tactics of a company.

Thursday—Field exercises.

Saturday—Regular inspection.

Rainy days—Individual soldier, tactics of a company.

I referred above to the 56th Brigade inspection. This is not a competitive inspection, but will be to find out how much the men as individuals have acquired during their training thus far. The inspection will consist of the following subjects for rifle companies:

1. Tactical training of the infantry soldier—scouting and patrolling, comoflauge, selection of firing positions, mental and physical mobility.

2. Technique of fire—range estimation, fire discipline, target designature, fire control.

3. Tactics of the rifle squad—formations, speed of action, use of scouts., service of security.

4. Rifle platoon in attack (weapons section attached)—orders, control by leaders, reconnaissance, use of weapons carriers, deployment.

This will give you an idea of what the average soldier of today must know and be able to execute before he is considered trained and a capable fighting man. You can see by this that the army really is no soft job, but one of alertness and good judgment.

This being a rather hot day and your reporter not having so very much energy, this little news article will have to come to an end. In closing, again I say, don't forget those letters.

METZGER-WRIGHT CO

Around New York

By GEORGE TUCKER

NEW YORK — One of the tokens of a changing world is the absence of the French motif in Broadway night clubs and the swift rise of Latin and Hawaiian music in recent seasons.

Five years ago the Follies Bergere was the central theme. There was the Casino de Paree of Billy Rose and the French Casino of Clifford C. Fischer.

Fischer, widely experienced as a producer of the Parisian type of entertainment, had spent many years in European capitals and had under his personal contract many of the personalities who gained fame in the Follies Bergere of Paris. His productions in New York were extravagant and pretentious. He went to untold lengths to obtain what he wanted. The result was a period of high French decor on Broadway.

It cannot have been a coincidence that the French note began to wane with the Spanish Civil War and the gathering of war clouds over Europe. Tourist agencies, quick to drive home the advantages of the slogan, "See America First," created a demand for Latin entertainment of all kinds.

Smash Success

The Spanish note at once manifested itself in the night clubs of the Village, of Broadway and of all the boroughs. Today, with one or two exceptions, the major clubs all feature dual orchestras—one American, the other Latin. . . . Today the most popular songs, as expressed by the voice of polls and by the Hit Parade, are sprinkled with tunes that have a Cuban, an Argentine and a south-of-the-border smack.

There are close to a hundred thousand Cubans in New York alone, and of this number a generous proportion are musicians.

They sponsored the Tango, the Rhumba, the Conga and the old South American Way. Today, it is not extravagant to say that the majority of the people who patronize night clubs in New York prefer Latin music and entertainment to any other

Another strong note in the contemporary scene has been the rise of Hawaiian dancing, music, and entertainment in recent years. The stronghold of Hawaiian entertainment in New York is the Hawaiia Room of the Hotel Lexington, where Ray Kinney's orchestra and Lani McIntire's orchestra have alternately played for the last four years.

Good Neighbor Policy

The South Seas theme has been further expanded on Broadway and its environs by other clubs, such as the Hurricane and the Beachcomber, so that today the twang of steel guitars and the swish of hula skirts is commonplace in the night life of the city.

This preference for Latin and Hawaiian entertainment has been vividly reflected on the Broadway stages, where the more elaborate of the reviews and crazy-quilt shows have featured South American and Hawaiian entertainers.

In sum, the war has brought the Americas closer together, even in their play. If it were true that the First World War was won on the fields of Eton, is it fantastic to wonder if the second might be won in the Conga Lines of New York?

(Tomorrow: 'Bank Night' at a Night Club.)

By GEORGE TUCKER

NEW YORK—What bingo is to the movies, free champagne is to the night clubs.

The managers themselves will tell you: "We don't play bingo. We give away a few bottles of wine now and then, but it's just in fun."

Phooey.

They give it away because it helps trade. At least, they think it helps trade. Night club managers are not noted for their altruistic instincts. They are business men in a business that is one of the most hazardous of all gambles. When the trade falls off, they face trouble. The overhead keeps going.

So, one of the things they do, caluculated to make the customer want to come back, is cater to the old bingo theme—the idea of giving away something for nothing.

Greenback Rain

Mr. Sherman Billingsley, shrewd, astute owner of the Stork Club, does better than champagne. He gives away $100 bank notes.

It works like this. Mr. Billingsley has several hundred balloons inflated, and into some of these he places his $100 bank notes. These balloons are suspended from the ceiling. At a given signal they begin to float down, and the scramble begins. To date there have been no broken bones, but the shrill cries of triumph from the lucky misses have often been heard as far as the Triborough bridge.

The champagne gesture can be worked a hundred ways and it has been popular since the nadir of the depression. Usually it is awarded as a prize, perhaps for the best dancers.

There's a night club in Greenwich Village that gives wine for lucky requests to the orchestra. Suppose there are 200 guests. Perhaps a number of guests will request a popular song. The seventh to ask for it is awarded the champagne.

Soothing Syrup

In still another club the entertainers summon stooges from the audience. They engage the victims in some form of competition, make them appear ridiculous, and then assuage their feelings with gift bottles of vintage champagne.

It isn't a bad feature at all. It's something to talk about—and people do talk. But, what is more important, they often go back and take their friends.

That's the idea—To get 'em back.

It's legitimate—and it's fun. But it's also bingo.

likes, but it just didn't work out.

"Joe and I are very friendly, really we are," she said, smiling. "We got along beautifully up to the first of the year. But Joe was just too busy for a family life—or at least he used that as an excuse. I guess his business just wasn't conducive to making a home."

Mrs. Louis, 24, asked restoration of her maiden name and temporary alimony. Informed of the suit, Louis appeared stunned, denied striking his wife, but said he would not contest the action.

He said they had had differences arising over her insistence that she accompany him to training camps and on exhibition tours.

They were married in New York Sept. 24, 1935, the night Joe knocked out Max Baer.

The divorce bill said Louis' annual income from fighting was $250,000 and that he owned real estate here and in Detroit, securities and insurance aggregating $800,000.

DECLARATION SIDELIGHTS

Philadelphia, July 4, 1776—Richard Henry Lee, who introduced the resolution of independence, wasn't here to vote for its passage or for the adoption of the declaration. He was called to his home in Virginia several days ago because of the illness of his wife.

Benjamin Franklin is the oldest delegate to the Congress which tonight approved the Declaration of Independence. Dr. Franklin is past 70 but looks and acts like a man in his late fifties.

Youngest member of the Congress is South Carolina's Edward Rutledge, who is 26. He is a lawyer who spent four years in study at Temple court, London. Also 26, but three months older than Rutledge, is Thomas Lynch, jr., of South Carolina. Lynch likewise is a lawyer and was educated at Eton and the University of Cambridge before completing law studies at Temple court.

In the first ballot on the Independence Resolution, the colony of Delaware, with only two members present, was divided. Whereupon Delegate Caesar Rodney rode his horse 80 miles through a thunderstorm in a posthaste journey from his Delaware home to turn the vote of that colony for the resolution.

The bell which prematurely proclaimed the adoption of the declaration was cast in London in 1752 and brought to Philadelphia and recast in this city in 1753, when the inscription, "Proclaim liberty throughout the world" was placed upon it.

Members of the Independence congress repreesnt many vocations. Twenty-four are lawyers, fourteen are agriculturists, nine are merchants, four are physicians, one is a minister of the gospel and one is a manufacturer.

NEW OFFICERS OF SHEFFIELD ROTARY SEATED

Sheffield, July 3—Installation of the following new staff of officers occurred at this week's meeting of the Rotary Club, held Tuesday noon in American Legion Home: Glenn Belknap, president; Rev. Ivan E. Rossell, vice president; Dr. J. A. Allen, treasurer; L. B. Jones, secretary. Rev. Rossell will serve also as program chairman.

The secretary's annual report was submitted, but due to the absence of former treasurer, Chris Yutze, who is employed out of town, the treasurer's report will not be given until the next meeting.

Elmore Carlson, local young man who is a Lutheran divinity student, was a guest of the club. He favored with a vocal solo, Miss Josephine Benson playing the accompaniment.

The next meeting of the club will be held in the Home Cottage, West Main street, new restaurant which is being opened by Mrs. Anna Byrne. It will be the club's regular meeting place for the next several months.

INSTALL SERVICE

For the past several days a line crew of the Pennsylvania Electric Company has been employed in Sheffield installing poles and equipment by which the utility company will extend its service to the homes along Keystone avenue and the three Mill streets, which heretofore have received their electricity from the Central Pennsylvania Lumber Company power plant.

During the past year, the lumber company, which owned the houses, has sold them to the occupants. With the mill shutting down permanently this week it no longer will supply electric service. Hence, the installation of service by the public utility firm.

Over 100 meters have been installed as part of the changeover project, which included also the setting of 42 poles and the stringing of approximately 32,000 feet of wire. Estimated cost is $7,704.

M. J. Sisk, of Warren, is in charge of the project.

The Commission also announced new examinations, with revised requirements for persons qualified in all branches of naval architecture and marine engineering. The salaries for such positions range from $2,600 to $5,600 a year. Persons who were not placed on employment registers as a result of the previous examinations for these positions, which closed June 30, 1941, are urged to apply at once under the terms of the new announcement. Applications will be accepted until June 30, 1942. College study in naval architecture or marine engineering, and professional experience in this work are ordinarily required; however, provision is made for the substitution of additional experience for education, and for the substitution of shipyard experience for the prescribed professional architectural or engineering experience.

All applications must be sent to the Washington office of the Civil Service Commission not later than the closing dates specified. Full information as to the requirements for these examinations, and application forms, may be obtained from W. U. McMichael, Secretary of the Board of U. S. Stalin Warns of "Danger" But Predicts Eventual Victory

By the Associated Press

Nazi High Command claims Red Army resistance "broken" along entire 2,000-mile front; Germans picture Russian troops engulfed in "unimaginable chaos"; Soviet war bulletin says main German drive toward Moscow is halted; vast new battle rages on Minsk-Moscow road 400 miles from Russian capital; Red Army reports "heavy defeat" inflicted on Germans in Ukraine; London hears German drives slowing up, Nazis massing for thrust at Leningrad.

Soviet Premier Stalin calls for "scorched earth" policy to help halt advancing German armies. Warns of "grave danger" but predicts eventual victory.

RAF bombs Ruhr and Rhine valleys and northwest Germany overnight; Germans continue attacks on British shipping.

United States endorses Uruguayan proposal for pledges by American republics of "constructive and practical cooperation" for defense.

Berlin, July 3—(AP)—The German High Command declared today that the resistance of the Red Army appears to have been broken and that an attack is under way on the entire front from the Arctic Ocean to the Black Sea.

The Prut river, boundary between Rumania and Sovietized Bessarabia, has been crossed by Allied-Rumanian forces driving from Moldavia, the war bulletin said, and they are advancing toward the Dnestr River.

"While hitherto, the Soviet Russian leadership apparently tried to catch the German advance near the border and start its own offensive", the communique asserted, "it now appears that resistance of the Soviet army is broken".

Official sources were unwilling today to interpret the meaning of the High Command's phrase and it was not possible to tell whether "achieving a decision of world historical importance" had reference merely to the Bialystok battle or whether it reflected the situation in the entire eastern conflict.

In reviewing action, Hitler's headquarters said that from June 22 to July 1 more than 160,000 Russians had been captured. The communique said the Russians offered stiff resistance and made desperate attempts to break out of encirclements only to lose many times as many men as those taken prisoner.

German losses were termed "gratifyingly small," but no figures were revealed.

During the same period, it was said, 5,774 tanks, 2,330 guns, four armored trains and 4,725 planes were destroyed or captured.

Although no late details were available Berlin advance units in the central sector were reported operating on the Minsk-Moscow highway. These units were reported last to have crossed the Berezina river on the way to Smolensk.

Dienst Aus Deutschland, usually well-informed commentary, told its readers the German "speed troops" were "progressing in a dash past Lwow" and that the Pripet marshes already had been left behind. These troops have as their objective, Dienst said, the Dnepr River city of Kiev, capital of the Ukraine.

Berlin sources said the Russian troops were not "evacuating" Gal-

Moscow, July 3—The vanguard of Moscow-bound German invaders was reported by the Russian High Command today to have been thrown back in repeated attempts to cross the Berezina river where in 1812 the waters were reddened by the blood of Napoleon's men under harassed retreat from the Russian capital.

Nearly 300 miles to the south of Borisov, where the battle of the Berezina centered, the Red army also was reported to have halted in "a heavy defeat" a mechanized advance toward Sheptovka, some 20 miles inside the old border of the Ukraine on the road to Kiev.

Other parts of the Ukraine invasion force were said to have attempted a break-through to the south toward Tarnopol, east of Lwow and south of Luck, still in the Ukraine's Polish buffer zone. These forces apparently had veered southward from Luck.

(Another threat to the Ukraine and its capital, Kiev—this from the southwest—appeared in a German High Command report that German and Rumanian troops finally had crossed the Prut river into Bessarabia and were driving toward the Dnster river.)

Thus, according to the latest Russian communique, two major battles raged on this 12th day of the Russian-German struggle—near Borisov, Less than 400 miles from Moscow on the Minsk-Moscow motor road, and in the Sheptovka-Tarnapol region, some 200 miles from Kiev.

It appeared that the full force of the German blitz had not yet reached the "bloody Berezina" at Borisov for the Red High Command made a point of saying only that "advanced detachments" had tried to cross the river.

(In Berlin it was said German ezina on the way to Smolensk).

Last night, the communique said, Red troops and motorized forces of the Germans fought fiercely in the Borisov area.

As for other fronts, including the Far North Murmansk sector, where the Russians claimed to have defeated about two infantry divisions attacking on the Sredni peninsula, the latest Russian communique reported only "night patrol activity and fighting of local character."

General George C. Marshall Suggests Draftees, Reserve Officers and National Guardsmen Be Kept In Service Longer Than One Year and Asks Removal of Restrictions Which Confine Armed Forces to Western Hemisphere

BIENNIAL REPORT IS MADE TO WAR CHIEF

Washington, July 3—(AP)—General George C. Marshall, army chief of staff, urged today that draftees, reserve officers and National Guardsmen be kept in service longer than one year and asked removal of restrictions which confine the United States armed forces to the western hemisphere.

In a biennial report to Secretary of War Stimson, Marshall said that events of the "past few days are even more forcible indications of the suddenness with which armed conflict can be spread to areas hitherto considered free from attack."

"There are," he added, "legal restrictions on the use of the armed forces which should be removed without delay. x x x

"It is urgently recommended that the War Department be given authority to extend the period of service of the selective service men, the officers of the reserve corps and the units of the National Guard."

The selective service act called for a maximum of one year of military training for these groups. The act also stipulated that these groups could not be used outside the western hemisphere.

Although Marshall called only for removal restrictions regarding temporary personnel, such as the selectees and guardsmen, a War Department official said the re-

Pennsylvania Counts Damage Running Into Thousands of Dollars in Wake Of Electrical Storms that Break Six-Day Heat Wave

By the Associated Press

Pennsylvania counted damage running into thousands of dollars today in the wake of electrical storms that broke a six-day heat wave fatal to at least 18 persons.

Temperatures that soared to new highs in some sections fell as much as 20 degrees as rains preceded a low pressure area into to state late yesterday. Forecasters said cooler weather would continue during the July fourth weekend and possibly longer.

The eastern section of the state bore the brunt of electrical storms, some damage was caused in the southeastern section. Scattered showers were reported in the west.

Lightning fired a new barn on the farm of the Meadowbrook Dairy Company, two miles east of Pottstown, the flames sweeping through the building, several adjoining sheds and two silos. Damage was estimated at $20,000.

Pleasant sleep was possible in Philadelphia last night for the first time in a week as rain pushed the thermometers down to 78 within a half hour. Harrisburg's .18 inch shower dropped the mercury from a high 96 to 75.

A maximum 98 was recorded at York, where John Benson, Washington, D. C., was overcome while at work on a construction project and died. Other fatalities attributed to the weather were Miss Anna Doerr, 74, Philadelphia; William Brauning, 39, and Andrew

United States, Holding That "The Safety of the Americas Hangs in the Balance" Whole-heartedly Sanctions the Suggestion That 21 Republics Exchange Specific Pledges Of "Constructive Cooperation"

REPLY IS PUBLISHED BY STATE DEPARTMENT

Washington, July 3—(AP)—The United States, holding that "the safety of the Americas hangs in the balance today," whole-heartedly endorsed the proposal of Uruguay that the 21 American republics exchange specific pledges of "constructive and practical cooperation" for defense.

The endorsement carried an appeal to the other republics to subscribe to the proposal because the western hemisphere was facing a threat of "aggression without comparison in history."

Under the Uruguayan proposal, submitted to all hemisphere republics by Foreign Minister Guani on June 21, the nations would pledge themselves not to "treat as a belligerent any American country which, in defense of its own rights, should find itself in a state of war with nations of other continents.

(The practical effect of all the republics uniting in such a policy of benevolent neutrality would be that the United States—if it became involved in war with the Axis—could utilize the naval bases, airfields and other defense facilities of South and Central American nations.

JAMES CHOOSES SITE FOR NEW STATE MANSION

Harrisburg, July 3—(AP)—Governor James has picked for the new executive mansion a site "only a 35-cent cab fare" from downtown Harrisburg hotels.

"My choice must be approved by the General State Authority Board," said James who signed yesterday a bill authorizing the construction.

"It'll be a 35-cent cab fare and a 35-minute walk from the hotels," the governor said.

Final adoption of the location is expected by the Authority board, of which James is president, at a meeting next Wednesday.

The governor said the site provided enough ground "for a baseball game and you won't be able to hit the ball out of the lot."

He added he would keep the location to himself until the negotiations for the property are completed.

Without that secrecy, James said prices might be "jacked up" and "we don't intend to spend $75,000 to $100,000 more than it's worth."

Asked if he had found a buyer for the old mansion on the highway facing the Susquehanna river, James said jestingly:

"Yes. I'm taking an option on the place myself."

The governor has urged replacing the brownstone home—used by Pennsylvania executives since the

Soviet Premier Calls Upon People to Meet Advancing German Armies With A Vast 'Scorched Earth' Policy, Acknowledging Invaders Have Already Captured Lithuania, Most of Latvia, Parts of White Russia and Ukraine

SUGGESTED RULES FOR FIGHTING ANNOUNCED

By the Associated Press

Moscow, July 3—Premier Joseph Stalin called upon the Russian people today to meet the advancing German armies with a vast "scorched earth" policy and with universal guerilla warfare.

He warned his people they were menaced by "a grave danger" and acknowledged that already Adolf Hitler's legions have captured Lithuania, most of Latvia, western White Russia and part of the western Ukraine.

But, he cried, it was recognized at home and abroad "that ours is a just cause, that the enemy will be defeated, that we are bound to win."

Stalin, making one of his rare speeches, attributed Nazi successes thus far "to the fact that the war of Fascist Germany on the U. S. S. R. began under conditions favorable for German forces and unfavorable for Soviet forces".

Speaking in his new role as chairman of the new defense committee, Stalin laid down these rules for fighting:

"In case of a forced retreat of Red Army units, all rolling stock must be evacuated, the enemy must not be left a single engine, a single railway car, not a single pound of grain or a gallon of fuel.

"Collective farmers must drive off all their cattle and turn over their grain to the safe-keeping of state authorities for transportation to the rear. All valuable property including non-ferrous metals, grain and fuel which cannot be withdrawn must without fail be destroyed.

"In areas occupied by the enemy, guerilla units, mounted and foot, must be formed, diversionist groups must be organized to combat enemy troops, to foment guerilla warfare everywhere, to blow up bridges, roads, damage telephone and telegraph lines and to set fire to forests, stores and

Washington, July 3.—(AP)—Petroleum Coordinator Ickes announced today he would request city police and state highway patrols in the east to arrest motorists wasting gasoline by use of improperly adjusted cars and making "jackrabbit" starts.

Conservation measures to combat the predicted oil scarcity on the seaboard, Ickes said, are "going to require something more than persuasion."

Officer Riding on Milk Truck When Strikers Attempt to Halt it and Dump Contents, is Crushed Under Wheels

MANY CANS SPILLED

Rutland, Vt. July 3—(AP)—Deputy Sheriff Ray Russell of Monkton was killed today during a fight that developed when striking dairy farmers attempted to dump a truckload of milk bound for the New York market.

Russell was riding on a milk truck bound from Waltham to Vergennes when strikers attempted to halt it and dump the truckload of milk. During the fight, Russell fell from the running board and was crushed beneath the wheels of the vehicle.

Addison county authorities at once sped to the scene of the clash which occurred in a relatively thinly-populated section.

Earlier, more than 6,000 gallons of milk bound for the New York milksheds was dumped in three towns by men who halted the trucks en route to plants.

At Bridgeport, two trucks were halted and 6,000 gallons of milk dumped on the road after the drivers were halted by a barricade. Eight cans of milk were dumped from a truck making a delivery at a Fair Haven bulk plant and 12 cans were spilled on the road at Vergennes.

The dairy farmers union called a "milk holiday" in Addison and Rutland counties to withhold milk from the New York shed pending agreement in a price dispute.

The union is seeking $3 a hundredweight for blended milk, compared with a June price of $1.88.

Forecasts of fair and cool weather for Pennsylvania's July Fourth week-end added impetus to preparations today for celebrations throughout the state.

While observances in various forms took shape, Governor James called for participation in a nation-wide celebration by listening to a radio broadcast by President Roosevelt planned in conntion with civilian defense.

The chief executive called on Pennsylvanians "to rededicate themselves to a priceless cause and heritage of liberty" by joining in singing the Star Spangled Banner and repeating the oath of allegiance during the ceremonies scheduled for 4 p. m. (EST) tomorrow.

Defense, keynote of the Independence Day feets, will keep many Pennsylvanians at their jobs. For the first time on record steel workers at Pittsburgh will pass up the holiday to turn out materials for Uncle Sam's preparedness program. At least 2,000 southwestern Pennsylvania soft coal miners also will continue digging to supply defense needs despite a five-day vacation in the industry.

Three hundred and fifty soldiers stationed at Indiantown Gap will participate in exercises at historic Fort Necessity near Uniontown, while more than 11,000 others will take a three-day holiday. Approximately 75 per cent of the reservation's population will get leaves.

Giant displays of fireworks, banned for private use, will highlight numerous celebrations.

Stalin Warns of "Danger" But Predicts Eventual Victory

NAZIS SAY RED ARMY RESISTANCE BROKEN ALONG ENTIRE FRONT

By the Associated Press

Nazi High Command claims Red Army resistance "broken" along entire 2,000-mile front; Germans picture Russian troops engulfed in "unimaginable chaos"; Soviet war bulletin says main German drive toward Moscow is halted; vast new battle rages on Minsk-Moscow road 400 miles from Russian capital; Red Army reports "heavy defeat" inflicted on Germans in Ukraine; London hears German drives slowing up, Nazis massing for thrust at Leningrad.

Soviet Premier Stalin calls for "scorched earth" policy to help halt advancing German armies. Warns of "grave danger" but predicts eventual victory.

RAF bombs Ruhr and Rhine valleys and northwest Germany overnight; Germans continue attacks on British shipping.

United States endorses Uruguayan proposal for pledges by American republics of "constructive and practical cooperation" for defense.

Berlin, July 3—(AP)—The German High Command declared today that the resistance of the Red army appears to have been broken and that an attack is under way on the entire front from the Arctic Ocean to the Black Sea.

The Prut river, boundary between Rumania and Sovietized Bessarabia, has been crossed by Allied-Rumanian forces driving from Moldavia, the war bulletin said, and they are advancing toward the Dnestr River.

"While hitherto, the Soviet Russian leadership apparently tried to attach the German advance near the border and start its own offensive", the communique asserted, "it now appears that resistance of the Soviet army is broken".

Official sources were unwilling today to interpret the meaning of the High Command's phrase and it was not possible to tell whether achieving a decision of world historical importance" had reference merely to the Bialystok battle or whether it reflected the situation on the entire eastern conflict.

In reviewing action, Hitler's headquarters said that from June 22 to July 1 more than 160,000 Russians had been captured. The communique said the Russians offered stiff resistance and made desperate attempts to break out of encirclements only to lose many times as many men as those taken prisoner.

German losses were termed gratifyingly small," but no figures were revealed.

During the same period, it was said, 5,774 tanks, 2,330 guns, four armored trains and 4,725 planes were destroyed or captured.

Although no late details were available Berlin advance units in the central sector were reported operating on the Minsk-Moscow highway. These units were reported last to have crossed the Berezina river on the way to Smolensk.

Dienst Aus Deutschland, usually well-informed commentary, told its readers the German "speed troops" were "progressing in a dash past Pripet" and that the Pripet marshes already had been left behind. These troops have as their objective, Dienst said, the Dnepr river city of Kiev, capital of the Ukraine.

Berlin sources said the Russian troops were not "evacuating" Gal-

Moscow, July 3—The vanguard of Moscow-bound German invaders was reported by the Russian High Command today to have been thrown back in repeated attempts to cross the Berezina river where in 1812 the waters were reddened by the blood of Napoleon's men under harassed retreat from the Russian capital.

Nearly 300 miles to the south of Borisov, where the battle of the Berezina centered, the Red army also was reported to have halted in "a heavy defeat" a mechanized advance toward Sheptovka, some 20 miles inside the old border of the Ukraine on the road to Kiev.

Other parts of the Ukraine invasion force were said to have attempted a break-through to the south toward Tarnopol, east of Lwow and south of Luck, still in the Ukraine's Polish buffer zone. These forces apparently had veered southward from Luck.

(Another threat to the Ukraine and its capital, Kiev—this from the southwest—appeared in a German High Command report that German and Rumanian troops finally had crossed the Prut river into Bessarabia and were driving toward the Dnster river.)

Thus, according to the latest Russian communique, two major battles raged on this 12th day of the Russian-German struggle—near Borisov, Less than 400 miles from Moscow on the Minsk-Moscow motor road, and in the Shepetovka-Tarnapol region, some 200 miles from Kiev.

It appeared that the full force of the German blitz had not yet reached the "bloody Berezina" at Borisov for the Red High Command made a point of saying only that "advanced detachments" had tried to cross the river.

(In Berlin it was said German ezina on the way to Smolensk).

Last night, the communique said, Red troops and motorized forces of the Germans fought fiercely in the Borisov area.

As for other fronts, including the Far North Murmansk sector, where the Russians claimed to have defeated about two infantry divisions attacking on the Sredni peninsula, the latest Russian communique reported only "night patrol activity and fighting of local character."

Washington, July 3—(AP)—General George C. Marshall, army chief of staff, urged today that draftees, reserve officers and National Guardsmen be kept in service longer than one year and asked removal of restrictions which confine the United States armed forces to the western hemisphere.

In a biennial report to Secretary of War Stimson, Marshall said that events of the "past few days are even more forcible indications of the suddenness with which armed conflict can be spread to areas hitherto considered free from attack."

Temperatures that soared to new highs in some sections fell as much as 20 degrees as rains preceded a low pressure area into to state late yesterday. Forecasters said cooler weather would continue during the July fourth weekend and possibly longer.

The eastern section of the state bore the brunt of electrical storms, some damage was caused in the southeastern section. Scattered showers were reported in the west.

Lightning fired a new barn on the farm of the Meadowbrook Dairy Company, two miles east of Pottstown, the flames sweeping through the building, several adjoining sheds and two silos. Damage was estimated at $20,000.

Pleasant sleep was possible in Philadelphia last night for the first time in a week as rain pushed the thermometers down to 78 within a half hour. Harrisburg's .18 inch shower dropped the mercury from a high 96 to 75.

United States, Holding That "The Safety of the Americas Hangs in the Balance" Whole-heartedly Sanctions the Suggestion That 21 Republics Exchange Specific Pledges Of "Constructive Cooperation"

REPLY IS PUBLISHED BY STATE DEPARTMENT

Washington, July 3—(AP)—The United States, holding that "the safety of the Americas hangs in the balance today," whole-heartedly endorsed the proposal of Uruguay that the 21 American republics exchange specific pledges of "constructive and practical cooperation" for defense.

The endorsement carried an appeal to the other republics to subscribe to the proposal because the western hemisphere was facing a threat of "aggression without comparison in history."

Under the Uruguayan proposal, submitted to all hemisphere republics by Foreign Minister Guani on June 21, the nations would pledge themselves not to "treat as a belligerent any American country which, in defense of its own rights, should find itself in a state of war with nations of other continents.

(The practical effect of all the republics uniting in such a policy of benevolent neutrality would be that the United States—if it became involved in war with the Axis—could utilize the naval bases, airfields and other defense facilities of South and Central American nations.

TWELVE WARREN COUNTY MEN TO GET DEFERMENT

Twelve Warren county men who were scheduled to be inducted into the U. S. Army at New Cumberland, Pa., on July 9 under the Selective Service system for a year of training, received notices today that they are given 30-day deferments.

Notification of the deferments was sent out by the two local draft boards as the result of action taken by state and national Selective Service headquarters.

The deferments are given pending the passage of a bill now in congress which would give the president the power to defer all men between 28 and 35 years of age.

TED LEWIS HIT HIGH SPOT IN GOOD SHOWS

Chalking up a high spot in the record of good shows red Lewis opens at the Library Theatre for one day only Tuesday July 8th afternoon and evening along with his glamorous rhythm, his old broken hat, his shadow, Charlie Snowball Whitter, his magic bandleaders stick. The years seemed to have rolled away, for Lewis never in his palmiest big-time days had a better show than his current "HAPPINESS REVUE OF 1941".

The revue is arranged with such fine showmanship that one act follows another in a flowingly easy movement with no stiff moments or awkward pauses to be bridged.

Kay Katya and Kay, two men and a girl, tear off at least three or four stanzas of the "poetry of motion" in their new pattern of ballroom and acrobatic stepping.

WARREN IS SET FOR QUIET JULY FOURTH HOLIDAY

With no public celebration planned here tomorrow, residents of Warren will be forced to find their own form of celebrating the Independence Day holiday.

A number are planning to visit nearby cities where celebrations are being held. Many will motor to nearby summer resorts. Others will enjoy picnic parties or family reunions.

Business in general will be at a standstill here tomorrow. Banks, stores and offices will be closed throughout the day. Many of the state offices will remain closed until Monday.

The post office will be closed all day tomorrow. Only special delivery mail will be delivered. However, mail will be received and dispatched as usual.

State motor police and other agencies have issued special warnings to motorists to use extreme caution on the highways over the holiday week-end in order to avoid accidents. Motorists have been advised to stay off detoured routes as much as possible and to start home early from trips in order to avoid congestion on the highways.

The weather report for the holiday indicates occasional showers in this section, with little change in temperature.

Oil City, Titusville, Indiana, Greensburg and Johnstown are among the western Pennsylvania cities which are having community celebrations.

At Oil City the program will include flag raising, baseball, a water carnival, fireworks and vaudeville. Titusville's program includes a program of sports, a parade, rodeo show, band concerts, patriotic motion pictures and a patriotic meeting with F. Clair Ross, state auditor general, as the speaker.

Mrs. Curns was taken to a hospital for treatment of bruises on her right arm.

TODAY IS LAST FOR SHEFFIELD MILL OF C. P. L.

Sheffield, July 3—Barring a breakdown of machinery at the Central Pennsylvania Lumber Company mill here today, the end of lumber manufacturing at the local plant and by the company itself will occur sometime late this afternoon, when the final leg of the hundreds of thousands milled at the plant since it was placed in operation over 33 years ago will be sawed.

The last truckloads of logs were hauled from the woods and dumped into the mill pond Tuesday, the trucking crews working overtime until 9 p. m. to complete the job. To assure completion of sawing operations today, the mill yesterday was operated 10 hours, two more than usual, and will be operated overtime again today if necessary.

In addition to being the death knell of what for so many years has been Sheffield's largest industry, "sawing out" at the local plant today means the end also of the Central Pennsylvania Lumber Company as a lumber manufacturer, inasmuch as the mill here is the last remaining one of the several the company has owned and operated down through the years.

A summary of the company's local and total operations will appear in a subsequent issue of the paper.

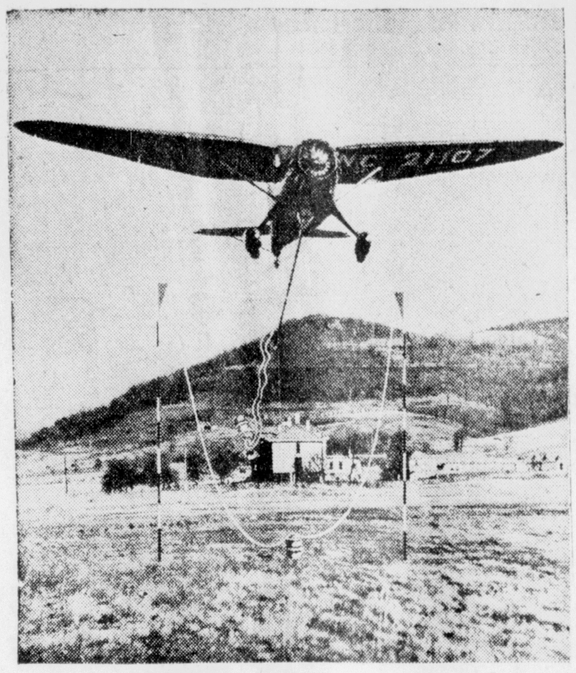
New Courier of the Airways



Latest postal facility is the air pick-up system by which airmail is picked up and delivered by airplane in flight. System which is operated by all American Aviation Inc. now serves 109 cities in West Virginia, Kentucky, Pennsylvania, Ohio, New York, and Delaware. Needing no airports, the air pick-up literally has brought direct airmail service within reach of every town in the country.

The new system for picking up and delivering air mail and air express by airplane in flight which has been developed by All American Aviation, Inc., will be placed in operation Monday, July 14, on the company's air pick-up route between Philadelphia and Pittsburgh via Harrisburg and 24 other intermediate points, and on its route between Pittsburgh and Jamestown, N. Y., which serves 13 intermediate points.

Air pick-up service will be inaugurated on the same day to Williamsburg, Portage and Blairsville on the Philadelphia-Pittsburgh route, and to Slippery Rock and Youngsville on the Pittsburgh-Jamestown route.

When service begins at these five points, the All American's air pick-up system will be in full operation.

This system comprises five routes which cover 109 cities and towns in Pennsylvania, Delaware, West Virginia, Ohio, New York and Kentucky. Air mail and air express service is provided by the air pick-up to all these places on two schedules a day, one in the morning and one in the afternoon, giving them overnight connections by air to and from every other airline point in the country.

The ground equipment for the new system featuring a portable station that is assembled and dismantled before and after each pick-up, instead of a fixed station, has been installed at all places on the two lines and practically everything else is in readiness for the change-over. The system already is in operation on All-American's other three routes.

PLAY AREAS OF BORO ARE GIVEN NEW FLAG POLES

Work has been completed this week on the erection of new flag poles at each of the five borough playgrounds and through the courtesy of Dinsmoor-Schwing Post, No. 631, Veterans of Foreign Wars, flags have been provided, it was announced today.

Each of the poles is 30 feet high. They are painted aluminum and make a very attractive appearance. By means of a hinged bolt, the poles can be raised or lowered if repairs or painting are needed. The flags are 5 by 9½ feet in size.

Flag raising ceremonies will be held by the kiddies at the various playgrounds each morning and this part of the daily program is expected to have its educational as well as citizenship values.

Local playground officials today expressed appreciation to the V. F. W. post for its cooperation in providing flags.

OUR FLAG

There's a fragment of His night sky
In its field and clustered stars.
There's a segment of His rainbow
In its alternating bars;
In its peerless folds are nestled
A sovereignty sublime
And a fervency for freedom
That will bide all human time.
Daniel B. Straley.

Average length of silk in a silkworm cocoon is 1526 feet, or more than one-quarter mile.

SPRINKLERS AT YLAYGROUNDS OF BORO ENJOYED

With the installation of sprinkler systems at the local playgrounds, the kiddies of the borough may further enjoy their play hours on these extremely warm days.

The sprinklers are of the shower type, the same as used in all large city parks. They throw a 30-foot spray from their cross-arms.

All children who have not used the sprinklers are invited to visit the playgrounds and use this enjoyable part of the equipment as much as they wish, park officials said today.

It has been announced that one of the sprinklers will be installed at the Lacy playground within the next few days.

All sprinklers have been installed through the courtesy of the Warren Water Company, which deserves much credit for helping make the local playgrounds more enjoyable. The company installed the sprinklers and is furnishing the water during the season without cost to the borough.

Another of Warren's more popular attractions is the wading pool with its sprinkler system at the South Side playground. The pool, provided through the efforts of the Seneca Parent-Teacher Association and Warren Lodge, No. 223, B. P. O. Elks, was opened last week and is again popular with the kiddies of the borough. A bronze plate showing the donors of the pool has been imbedded in one corner.

When service begins at these five points, the All American's air pick-up system will be in full operation.

This system comprises five routes which cover 109 cities and towns in Pennsylvania, Delaware, West Virginia, Ohio, New York and Kentucky. Air mail and air express service is provided by the air pick-up to all these places on two schedules a day, one in the morning and one in the afternoon, giving them overnight connections by air to and from every other airline point in the country.

The ground equipment for the new system featuring a portable station that is assembled and dismantled before and after each pick-up, instead of a fixed station, has been installed at all places on the two lines and practically everything else is in readiness for the change-over. The system already is in operation on All-American's other three routes.

PLAY AREAS OF BORO ARE GIVEN NEW FLAG POLES

Work has been completed this week on the erection of new flag poles at each of the five borough playgrounds and through the courtesy of Dinsmoor-Schwing Post, No. 631, Veterans of Foreign Wars, flags have been provided, it was announced today.

Each of the poles is 30 feet high. They are painted aluminum and make a very attractive appearance. By means of a hinged bolt, the poles can be raised or lowered if repairs or painting are needed. The flags are 5 by 9½ feet in size.

Flag raising ceremonies will be held by the kiddies at the various playgrounds each morning and this part of the daily program is expected to have its educational as well as citizenship values.

Local playground officials today expressed appreciation to the V. F. W. post for its cooperation in providing flags.

CLOSED INDEPENDENCE DAY—JULY 4th

MANY FEATURES LISTED ON AIR FOR JULY 4TH

A message from President Roosevelt to the nation celebrating its birth 165 years ago is the high spot in Fourth of July broadcasting, according to the Associated Press.

All networks will carry the program. CBS has scheduled its start at 3:55 p. m., with NBC and MBS starting at 4 p. m. Friday. Every available short wave relay will be in action, too, augmented by translations.

The program, under the auspices of the Office of Civilian Defense, headed by Mayor F. H. LaGuardia, of New York, is designed to rededicate the nation to the spirit of 1776, and is to include the oath of allegiance.

By networks they include:

NBC-Red—7 p. m., Lucille Manners special concert from Toronto; 9:30, Canadian salute by Montreal symphony and choir.

CBS—4:45—R. G. Case, Australian minister, on "Australia's Place in the World"; 3:30, Fourth of July in Britain; 8:30, Sen. Josiah W. Bailey, on "Our Republic, It Must Be Preserved."

SPRINKLERS AT YLAYGROUNDS OF BORO ENJOYED

With the installation of sprinkler systems at the local playgrounds, the kiddies of the borough may further enjoy their play hours on these extremely warm days.

The sprinklers are of the shower type, the same as used in all large city parks. They throw a 30-foot spray from their cross-arms.

All children who have not used the sprinklers are invited to visit the playgrounds and use this enjoyable part of the equipment as much as they wish, park officials said today.

It has been announced that one of the sprinklers will be installed at the Lacy playground within the next few days.

All sprinklers have been installed through the courtesy of the Warren Water Company, which deserves much credit for helping make the local playgrounds more enjoyable. The company installed the sprinklers and is furnishing the water during the season without cost to the borough.

Another of Warren's more popular attractions is the wading pool with its sprinkler system at the South Side playground. The pool, provided through the efforts of the Seneca Parent-Teacher Association and Warren Lodge, No. 223, B. P. O. Elks, was opened last week and is again popular with the kiddies of the borough. A bronze plate showing the donors of the pool has been imbedded in one corner.

LOOKING BACK 165 YEARS AGO

Now it is the Fourth of July again, and for those in this community who elect to remain at home the holiday will be one of extreme quiet. In such an atmosphere we turn to the memory of the day when the American colonies declared their independence of Great Britain and became an independent nation.

President Roosevelt urges the American people to rededicate themselves on the Fourth to "defend and perpetuate those inalienable rights which found true expression" in the Declaration of Independence.

Let us not look back at that day in 1776 through a rosy haze or historical fuddlement. When the bell rang in Philadelphia on that hot July day it was no signal for one great unanimous upswelling of joy. More than a year of war already lay behind the struggling colonies when Hancock wrote his bold signature; nearly seven more years of bitter struggle lay ahead.

It was no exercise in literary composition, that declaration, it was a decision. It was a decision of value only as it was made to stick with a cement of grit and blood.

The country was by no means unanimous in the decision, any more than it is unanimous in decisions that are being made today.

Many wagged their heads and said "We Americans can't win," in words not unfamiliar. Others gloomily feared that the radicals were in the saddle and that even a successful separation from England would leave a country scarcely fit to live in. Some feared for their lives, some for their money and property. Some found it better business to sell their provisions and supplies to the British for gold than to the Continental Congress for depreciating paper. Some snorted at the possibility of a French alliance—was not Louis XVI a dictator and no fit company for good democrats? Some felt it would be better, cheaper in the long run, to pay unjust taxes than to fight a costly war. Some feared change itself as they felt their world slipping out from under them.

Oh, they were not all heroes then, those founding fathers who plunked for independence on July 4, 1776. They were about like us, good and bad, strong and weak, far-visioned and near-sighted—and just middling. They weren't giants, they were just people like us, with their personal problems, likes, and dislikes. But in the end they faced their crisis and they saw it through. When the time came, they decided, and having decided, they allowed neither domestic dissidents nor foreign enemies to stop them.

That is the one thing to remember about the forebears whose Declaration of Independence we celebrate tomorrow. They wanted a world in which they could breathe the air freely. They went out and got it.

In this year of world turmoil it would be well if parents would relate to their children some of the history of the country. Tell the youngsters what the men and women of colonial days suffered and endured, so that we, their successors, should have freedom, education and happiness. Let us enjoy July Fourth with a feeling of gratitude, that we had such noble ancestors who did such grand things that we might live the "American way" in this year, 1941.

FOUR RULES FOR A SAFE FOURTH

(Suggested by the National Safety Council)

First—Don't use fireworks.

Second—Take it easy on the road. Start in time. Don't speed or take chances in passing especially on hills or curves.

Third—Don't overdo in exercise, eating or exposure to sun.

Four—If you swim: Don't go in alone or when overheated. Wait an hour after eating. Know the depth of the water. Don't show off or indulge in horseplay.

That accident in Madison avenue last evening, which could easily have resulted more seriously, emphasizes the need of more caution on the part of bicycle riders in the borough.

Scores of tourist parties will be passing through Warren the next few days. Don't forget to help make them feel welcome.

Don't forget to hang out Old Glory tomorrow!

Fourth of July Piece

• EDSON'S WASHINGTON COLUMN

BY PETER EDSON
Times-Mirror Washington Correspondent

Washington, July 3—Sooner or later there will have to be a showdown in the Department of Agriculture between SMA and AAA, which are really a lot differenter than the Tweedle twins, Dum and Dee.

In case you're not up on your Washington code talk, SMA is Surplus Marketing Administration and triple-A is Agricultural Adjustment Administration. Or, if these things are meaningless unless presented in terms of personalities, SMA is Milo Perkins and AAA is Rudolph M. Evans. These two gentlemen speak to each other and might even be called pals, but the organizations they head operate on two different philosophies and there's the rub.

SMA's function is to remove price-depressing surpluses of farm products not covered by AAA. SMA buys the surpluses at the lowest possible prices, takes them off the market, sells them for export, or distributes them to the states for relief of the poor.

AAA monkeys only with five commodities—cotton, corn, wheat, rice and tobacco, and guarantees producers of these crops will obtain 85 per cent of the well known parity price, the "fair" price paid to farmers from 1909 to 1914 for all crops except tobacco, which has its parity based on the 1919-1929 price.

From this all-too-simple explanation, it can be seen that there is a fundamental difference in viewpoint. SMA buys at distress prices. AAA despises the idea of distress prices and guarantees high prices to the farmers who play along with its program.

Threatening to bring the conflict to a showdown is a little measure known as the Gore amendment to the Steagall bill, which has been receiving attention of Congress these last few months. The Steagall bill is a banking bill to prolong the life of the Commodities Credit Corporation, and the Gore amendment has nothing to do with banking, but that's the funny way congressmen sometimes get things done. What the amendments would provide is that no federal funds could be used to purchase agricultural products at a price which is below parity.

Now the Gore amendment may not get any place, but it is important because it is an attempt to put over a law that would apply the parity principle to crops other than the big five.

If general legislation to that effect were ever put on the books, it would do all sorts of things. It would give the farmers higher prices for everything they raised, which would be nice for the farmers, but it would unquestionably raise the cost of living for others. And it would wreck the operations of the Surplus Marketing Administration, as well as other federal activities like the Commodities Credit Corporation and even the food stamp plan.

It would mean that whenever the government went into the market to buy surpluses for relief or for export, it would have to pay full parity prices on everything, prunes as well as potatoes. Currently, it would raise the price of all commodities which the government is buying for aid to Britain under the lease-lend act, meats, poultry and dairy products, on which the government has asked farmers to step up production. It would cost taxpayers no telling how many more millions of dollars.

Inspiration for this idea of applying the parity principle to all farm products not just the big five, now stems principally from the American Farm Bureau Federation which has been advocating full parity for everything for years. In the last election, AFBF went whole hog for Willkie because its leaders thought Roosevelt wasn't giving enough necouragement to

By JACK STINNETT

WASHINGTON—Some folks here are perturbed about the possibilities of a traffic jam on the highways of the air.

The other day a delegation called on the President and urged him to appoint an "air control coordinator," a sort of traffic cop of the air, with broad powers to regulate traffic even to the point, if necessary, of grounding private flying in army and navy maneuver areas.

Trying to get anything official on the situation is like trying to pull teeth with eyebrow tweezers. On both sides of the fence, authorities are afraid of touching off a powder keg. There are more than 30,000 airplanes of all types in the country today. About 17,000 of these are private and commercial planes. There are tens of thousands of pilots. Add a few million pasengers and you have some idea of the persons affected by any regulations or curtailment of private flying.

On the other hand, it was realized that the army and navy must have some priorities in the skyways even before the Civil Aeronautics Board came out of its huddle recently and established a ceiling of seventeen thousand feet above sea level for all commercial and private aviation. Above that the skies belong to the army and navy. The board added the further regulation that all planes not equipped with two-way radios and sensitive altimeters must stay within 3,500 feet of the ground.

THIS caused a little easier breathing in those aeronautical circles that feared the appointment of a traffic cop for the skyways would wreck the private flying as well as the civilian pilot training program—that vast reservoir out of which the army and navy are drawing so many of their flying cadets. Whether it is a complete solution remains to be seen.

It doesn't eliminate one of the army's chief grouches, namely that secret air maneuvers are handicapped by civilian flying. A secret maneuver can't very well be secret if the army has to notify dozens of airport dispatchers just what it plans to do and when.

It is believed, however, that stratification of traffic on a 30,000-mile skyway network will simplify matters not only for the flyers but for those men who keep the radio beams buzzing in the nation's 400 range stations.

HOW the whole thing started isn't positive, but in recent weeks a lot of stories have been drifting into Washington about congestion as a result of military aviation. One such was that of a kittenish army pilot, tail man in a formation flight, had decided to practice an Immelman turn on the tail of a cross-country airliner. Apparently, the fellow didn't come close, but it was near enough to scare the daylights out of a few passengers. Another report was that an army pilot, given the all clear to land his high speed fighter plane on a midwestern port, hit the runway just as a student flyer was taxiing his little plane across the field. The army pilot had to spin his plane and rip off a wing to avoid a collision. These stories were numerous and undoubtedly gave rise to the fact that something should be done.

ANY mention of a traffic jam on the highways of the air at this point, however, is especially amusing in view of what Charles Stanton, deputy administrator of the Civilian Aeronautics Authority, once told me.

"Our program and our plans here are not just aimed at next week or even next year. We are looking forward to the day when the United States will have 300,000 to 500,000 airplanes. That's just about one plane for every 60 autos, which certainly isn't too much to expect. On that basis, within a 25-mile radius of New York City, there would be 50,000 planes. And when that time comes, we will be ready to handle the situation without any complications."

So these are just the horse and buggy days of aviation.

LOOKING BACK 165 YEARS AGO

Now it is the Fourth of July again, and for those in this community who elect to remain at home the holiday will be one of extreme quiet. In such an atmosphere we turn to the memory of the day when the American colonies declared their independence of Great Britain and became an independent nation.

President Roosevelt urges the American people to rededicate themselves on the Fourth to "defend and perpetuate those inalienable rights which found true expression" in the Declaration of Independence.

Let us not look back at that day in 1776 through a rosy haze or historical fuddlement. When the bell rang in Philadelphia on that hot July day it was no signal for one great unanimous upswelling of joy. More than a year of war already lay behind the struggling colonies when Hancock wrote his bold signature; nearly seven more years of bitter struggle lay ahead.

It was no exercise in literary composition, that declaration, it was a decision. It was a decision of value only as it was made to stick with a cement of grit and blood.

The country was by no means unanimous in the decision, any more than it is unanimous in decisions that are being made today.

Many wagged their heads and said "We Americans can't win," in words not unfamiliar. Others gloomily feared that the radicals were in the saddle and that even a successful separation from England would leave a country scarcely fit to live in. Some feared for their lives, some for their money and property. Some found it better business to sell their provisions and supplies to the British for gold than to the Continental Congress for depreciating paper. Some snorted at the possibility of a French alliance—was not Louis XVI a dictator and no fit company for good democrats? Some felt it would be better, cheaper in the long run, to pay unjust taxes than to fight a costly war. Some feared change itself as they felt their world slipping out from under them.

Oh, they were not all heroes then, those founding fathers who plunked for independence on July 4, 1776. They were about like us, good and bad, strong and weak, far-visioned and near-sighted—and just middling. They weren't giants, they were just people like us, with their personal problems, likes, and dislikes. But in the end they faced their crisis and they saw it through. When the time came, they decided, and having decided, they allowed neither domestic dissidents nor foreign enemies to stop them.

That is the one thing to remember about the forebears whose Declaration of Independence we celebrate tomorrow. They wanted a world in which they could breathe the air freely. They went out and got it.

In this year of world turmoil it would be well if parents would relate to their children some of the history of the country. Tell the youngsters what the men and women of colonial days suffered and endured, so that we, their successors, should have freedom, education and happiness. Let us enjoy July Fourth with a feeling of gratitude, that we had such noble ancestors who did such grand things that we might live the "American way" in this year, 1941.

FOUR RULES FOR A SAFE FOURTH

(Suggested by the National Safety Council)

First—Don't use fireworks.

Second—Take it easy on the road. Start in time. Don't speed or take chances in passing especially on hills or curves.

Third—Don't overdo in exercise, eating or exposure to sun.

Four—If you swim: Don't go in alone or when overheated. Wait an hour after eating. Know the depth of the water. Don't show off or indulge in horseplay.

That accident in Madison avenue last evening, which could easily have resulted more seriously, emphasizes the need of more caution on the part of bicycle riders in the borough.

Scores of tourist parties will be passing through Warren the next few days. Don't forget to help make them feel welcome.

Don't forget to hang out Old Glory tomorrow!

Fourth of July Piece

• EDSON'S WASHINGTON COLUMN

BY PETER EDSON
Times-Mirror Washington Correspondent

Washington, July 3—Sooner or later there will have to be a showdown in the Department of Agriculture between SMA and AAA, which are really a lot differenter than the Tweedle twins, Dum and Dee.

In case you're not up on your Washington code talk, SMA is Surplus Marketing Administration and triple-A is Agricultural Adjustment Administration. Or, if these things are meaningless unless presented in terms of personalities, SMA is Milo Perkins and AAA is Rudolph M. Evans. These two gentlemen speak to each other and might even be called pals, but the organizations they head operate on two different philosophies and there's the rub.

SMA's function is to remove price-depressing surpluses of farm products not covered by AAA. SMA buys the surpluses at the lowest possible prices, takes them off the market, sells them for export, or distributes them to the states for relief of the poor.

AAA monkeys only with five commodities—cotton, corn, wheat, rice and tobacco, and guarantees producers of these crops will obtain 85 per cent of the well known parity price, the "fair" price paid to farmers from 1909 to 1914 for all crops except tobacco, which has its parity based on the 1919-1929 price.

From this all-too-simple explanation, it can be seen that there is a fundamental difference in viewpoint. SMA buys at distress prices. AAA despises the idea of distress prices and guarantees high prices to the farmers who play along with its program.

Threatening to bring the conflict to a showdown is a little measure known as the Gore amendment to the Steagall bill, which has been receiving attention of Congress these last few months. The Steagall bill is a banking bill to prolong the life of the Commodities Credit Corporation, and the Gore amendment has nothing to do with banking, but that's the funny way congressmen sometimes get things done. What the amendments would provide is that no federal funds could be used to purchase agricultural products at a price which is below parity.

Now the Gore amendment may not get any place, but it is important because it is an attempt to put over a law that would apply the parity principle to crops other than the big five.

If general legislation to that effect were ever put on the books, it would do all sorts of things. It would give the farmers higher prices for everything they raised, which would be nice for the farmers, but it would unquestionably raise the cost of living for others. And it would wreck the operations of the Surplus Marketing Administration, as well as other federal activities like the Commodities Credit Corporation and even the food stamp plan.

It would mean that whenever the government went into the market to buy surpluses for relief or for export, it would have to pay full parity prices on everything, prunes as well as potatoes. Currently, it would raise the price of all commodities which the government is buying for aid to Britain under the lease-lend act, meats, poultry and dairy products, on which the government has asked farmers to step up production. It would cost taxpayers no telling how many more millions of dollars.

Inspiration for this idea of applying the parity principle to all farm products not just the big five, now stems principally from the American Farm Bureau Federation which has been advocating full parity for everything for years. In the last election, AFBF went whole hog for Willkie because its leaders thought Roosevelt wasn't giving enough necouragement to Little known facts about that part of the world war are often made clear by comparison with familiar places in this country. Answer true or false to the following questions of comparison, and tell why.

1. The Mississippi river is longer than the Danube.
2. Syria is larger than the state of Georgia.
3. It is farther from London to Alexandria by air than from New York to San Francisco.
4. The Sahara Desert is smaller than the state of Texas.
5. The Suez Canal is longer than the Panama Canal.

A Washington Daybook

By JACK STINNETT

WASHINGTON—Some folks here are perturbed about the possibilities of a traffic jam on the highways of the air.

The other day a delegation called on the President and urged him to appoint an "air control coordinator," a sort of traffic cop of the air, with broad powers to regulate traffic even to the point, if necessary, of grounding private flying in army and navy maneuver areas.

Trying to get anything official on the situation is like trying to pull teeth with eyebrow tweezers. On both sides of the fence, authorities are afraid of touching off a powder keg. There are more than 30,000 airplanes of all types in the country today. About 17,000 of these are private and commercial planes. There are tens of thousands of pilots. Add a few million pasengers and you have some idea of the persons affected by any regulations or curtailment of private flying.

On the other hand, it was realized that the army and navy must have some priorities in the skyways even before the Civil Aeronautics Board came out of its huddle recently and established a ceiling of seventeen thousand feet above sea level for all commercial and private aviation. Above that the skies belong to the army and navy. The board added the further regulation that all planes not equipped with two-way radios and sensitive altimeters must stay within 3,500 feet of the ground.

THIS caused a little easier breathing in those aeronautical circles that feared the appointment of a traffic cop for the skyways would wreck the private flying as well as the civilian pilot training program—that vast reservoir out of which the army and navy are drawing so many of their flying cadets. Whether it is a complete solution remains to be seen.

It doesn't eliminate one of the army's chief grouches, namely that secret air maneuvers are handicapped by civilian flying. A secret maneuver can't very well be secret if the army has to notify dozens of airport dispatchers just what it plans to do and when.

It is believed, however, that stratification of traffic on a 30,000-mile skyway network will simplify matters not only for the flyers but for those men who keep the radio beams buzzing in the nation's 400 range stations.

HOW the whole thing started isn't positive, but in recent weeks a lot of stories have been drifting into Washington about congestion as a result of military aviation. One such was that of a kittenish army pilot, tail man in a formation flight, had decided to practice an Immelman turn on the tail of a cross-country airliner. Apparently, the fellow didn't come close, but it was near enough to scare the daylights out of a few passengers. Another report was that an army pilot, given the all clear to land his high speed fighter plane on a midwestern port, hit the runway just as a student flyer was taxiing his little plane across the field. The army pilot had to spin his plane and rip off a wing to avoid a collision. These stories were numerous and undoubtedly gave rise to the fact that something should be done.

ANY mention of a traffic jam on the highways of the air at this point, however, is especially amusing in view of what Charles Stanton, deputy administrator of the Civilian Aeronautics Authority, once told me.

"Our program and our plans here are not just aimed at next week or even next year. We are looking forward to the day when the United States will have 300,000 to 500,000 airplanes. That's just about one plane for every 60 autos, which certainly isn't too much to expect. On that basis, within a 25-mile radius of New York City, there would be 50,000 planes. And when that time comes, we will be ready to handle the situation without any complications."

So these are just the horse and buggy days of aviation.

COLONIES PROCLAIM FREEDOM

Congress Approves Final and Complete Break With Britain

If there had been daily newspapers and leased wire services in 1776, the big headlines at colonial breakfast tables on the morning of July 5 would have been over a dispatch from Philadelphia, where the Continental Congress was in session. The Congress had taken a drastic move. Here is an AP Feature Service writer's version of how it would have been reported if present-day news - gathering and distributing facilities had existed.

Philadelphia, July 4, 1776—The Continental Congress late today adopted a "declaration of independence".

The document proclaims to the world that the colonies have broken all ties with Great Britain and have become the 13 free and independent United States of America.

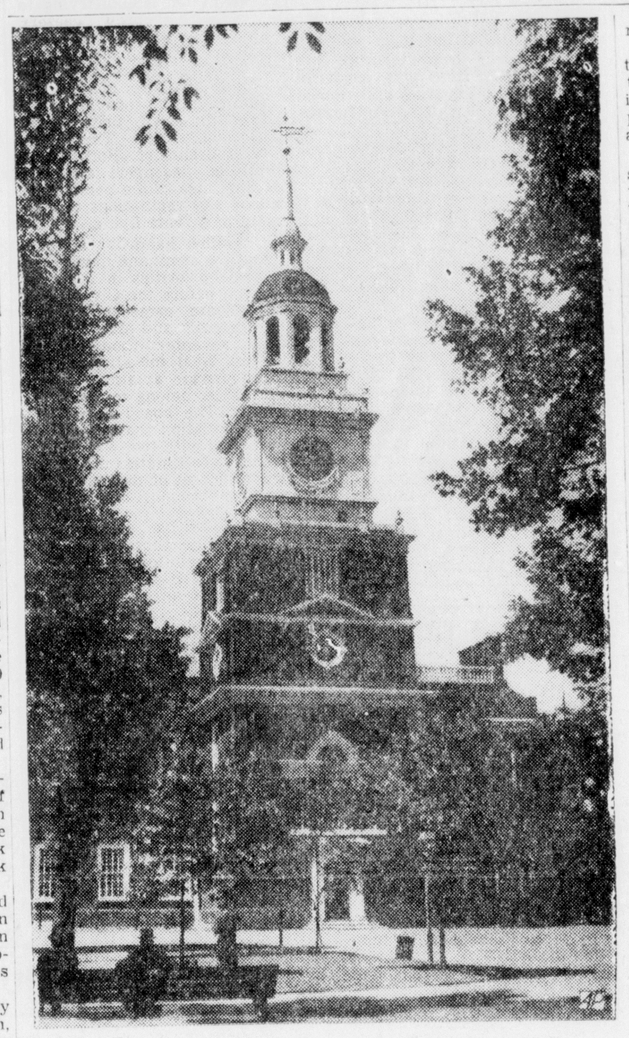
Approval came after two days of debate as to its wording, held behind closed doors in the scandalously expensive State House of Pennsylvania. (It cost $28,000 to build.) The windows were open, however, and in streamed swarms of flies from a nearby livery stable to assail the silk-stockinged legs of the perspiring delegates.

The complete break with Britain coincides with the receipt of dispatches saying that British General Howe has landed a large army of Redcoats on Sandy Hook and is marching on New York city.

The declaration ratifies and puts into specific form the action taken by Congress on July 2 when it passed the independence resolution introduced by Virginia's handsome Richard Henry Lee.

The document, written by scholarly "Long Tom" Jefferson, 33-year-old freckled-faced delegate from Virginia, sets forth that "governments are instituted to secure the inalienable rights of men to life, liberty and the pursuit of happiness".

It goes on to say that "whenever any government becomes destructive of these ends, it is the right of the people to alter or abolish it and to institute new government, laying its foundations on such principles . . . as shall seem most likely to effect their safety and happiness."



In 1776 the Pennsylvania State House was a symbol of extravagance in public building. It cost $28,000. On July 4 that year the building was the scene of events which brought new fame and a new name—Independence Hall. This is how the building appears today.

The declaration asserts that the states "have full power to levy war, conclude peace, contract alliances, establish commerce and do all other things that independent states may of right do."

The declaration was signed tonight by the president of the Congress, wealthy John Hancock of Massachusetts. Hancock, writing his name in large letters, said: "There, John Bull may read my name without spectacles."

Hancock's signature was attested by Charles Thomson, secretary of the Congress. The 50 odd individual members of the congress probably will sign the document at an early date.

Copies of the declaration will be sent to the several assemblies, conventions, councils of safety, and to General George Washington and the several commanding officers for reading to the continental troops. There is talk also of holding a great celebration of independence in the State House on July 8.

It seems that the bell in the tower of the State House was rung prematurely this afternoon. About 2 o'clock a boy on watch below shouted to the old bellman in the tower above: "Ring". Final approval of the declaration, however, was not made until this evening.

The original draft of the document as it came from the committee of five, headed by Jefferson, was amended somewhat. A notable excision was a passage charging the King with carrying on the slave trade and with refusing to allow American legislatures to suppress it.

Members contended it was inconsistent to arraign the king for doing something that some of the colonies were carrying on so energetically. During the debate Jefferson never said a word in defense of his own work, but he winced as he saw some of his most cherished phrases on liberty eliminated.

The enthusiasm displayed the day before yesterday by the oratorical, rotund John Adams of the independence resolution was still undimmed tonight.

"The second day of July will be the most memorable epoch in the history of America," said Adams. "I am apt to believe that it will be celebrated by succeeding generations as the great anniversary festival."

Delegate Abraham Clark, of New Jersey, said, "Our Congress is an august assembly, and can they support the declaration now on the anvil, they will be the greatest assembly on earth."

That Clark, however, is somewhat dubious over the outcome of today's action is indicated by the fact that he told a colleague he didn't know whether his title would turn out to be "honorable" or "dishonorable".

"Perhaps," he said, "our Congress will be exalted on a high gallows. The issue of the war will settle it."

McPHERRAN SYSTEM ALLOWS A 'SAVE' ON LAYDOWN GAME

BY WM. E. McKENNEY
America's Card Authority

Some months ago I wrote a series of articles on the McPherran no trump convention. At the national tournament in Asbury Park in August, the young star, Robert Pherran, will be found playing this convention with one or two favorite partners.

While dangerous for the inexperienced, the convention has a lot of possibilities. McPherran can be expected to make a good showing at Asbury Park.

Today's hand is a "type 2" hand for the McPherran no trump bid, a hand with little defense but one fair "out" suit. McPherran, sitting South, opened with one no trump. West doubled in order to force North and South to disclose which type of hand the no-trumper was. North redoubled, of course, showing real honor trick strength. Over two clubs McPherran bid his heart suit, anticipating that it might be necessary to save against an adverse game bid.

This very situation came about. It is interesting to note the effect of the McPherran convention in the result. At most tables North doubled four spades. South had no occasion to rescue, since in most cases South passed originally and his entry into the auction later did not guarantee any defensive strength. Still, it is only natural for the North player to hope that South will furnish some strength on defense.

McPherran's partner, however, knew from the "Type 2" opening bid that it would be folly to count on South for any defensive strength. At the same time, the assurance that McPherran had at least six hearts made the save at five hearts seem a safe gamble, as it was. McPherran was set only one trick, whereas four spades was a laydown.

SERVICE TO GAME BRINGS VANDERBILT WETZLAR TROPHY

There is one trophy in bridge which cannot be won. It is awarded each year by the Wetzlar committee to a man who has been outstanding in the game. This year the Wetzlar trophy was won by Harold S. Vanderbilt, who introduced contract into the United States in 1925.

Vanderbilt is chairman of the laws committee of the Whist Club of New York, which has always prepared the laws for rubber bridge. He is also the donor of the Vanderbilt Cup, the trophy awarded to the winners of the national knockout team-of-four championship, and of course he is the originator of the Vanderbilt bidding system.

This system incorporates an artificial club bid to show a hand containing about three and one-half honor tricks. Partner is forced to respond and any response other than one dimamond shows about two tricks. Here is an example of the use of the Vanderbilt club convention.

Despite his long strong club suit, North must not bid two clubs over the conventional club bid by South. He must respond with one diamond, to show less than two honor tricks. But having done this duty, he is entitled to make a jump takeout over one no trump.

South realizes at once, after hearing the diamond response, that North cannot hold two aces. Therefore a slam appears impossible, and South must put on the brakes no matter how strongly North bids. If North has one ace and a void, he must make up his own mind about the slam. Hence over four clubs South is careful not to indulge in any slam try, such as four no trump.

It is too difficult to stop at the right contract of five after a slam try. The simple raise to five clubs says, "As you won't agree to stop at three no trump, I will play five clubs, but I can't propose any higher contract."

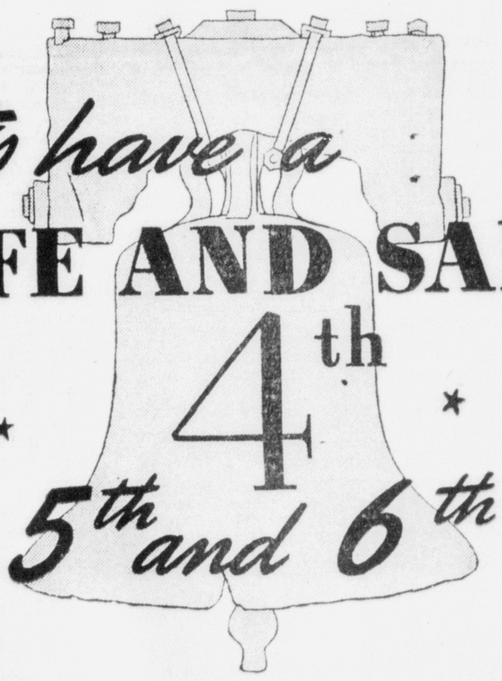
Let's have a "SAFE AND SANE" 4th ... 5th and 6th



A FEW YEARS BACK America concentrated on the idea of a "Safe and Sane Fourth of July". Through the earnest effort of public-spirited citizens, and law enforcement agencies . . . the children of America are far safer on Independence Day.

We've saved the children from their own carelessness. Now let's have a "safe and sane" 4th, 5th and 6th of July on the highways!

Over this three-day Independence Day weekend . . . let's make a real start toward reducing the holiday toll on Pennsylvania highways. It can be done if you do your part. Before you start anywhere, be sure your car is in good mechanical condition . . . that its brakes, tires and lights are in perfect trim. On your way . . . there and back . . . drive carefully, courteously, completely in control of your car every split-second!

Watch for children on the roads . . . going on picnics . . . playing ball. Keep under fifty . . . and keep on your own side of the road at all times. Allow plenty of time for your trip. You know now that traffic will be heavy . . . so plan now to start early . . . to use the less-travelled roads wherever and whenever possible.

Be a good American on this great American holiday by driving safely and sanely on the 4th, 5th and 6th . . . and throughout the year.

COLONIES PROCLAIM FREEDOM

Congress Approves Final and Complete Break With Britain

If there had been daily newspapers and leased wire services in 1776, the big headlines at colonial breakfast tables on the morning of July 5 would have been over a dispatch from Philadelphia, where the Continental Congress was in session. The Congress had taken a drastic move. Here is an AP Feature Service writer's version of how it would have been reported if present-day news - gathering and distributing facilities had existed.

Philadelphia, July 4, 1776—The Continental Congress late today adopted a "declaration of independence".

The document proclaims to the world that the colonies have broken all ties with Great Britain and have become the 13 free and independent United States of America.

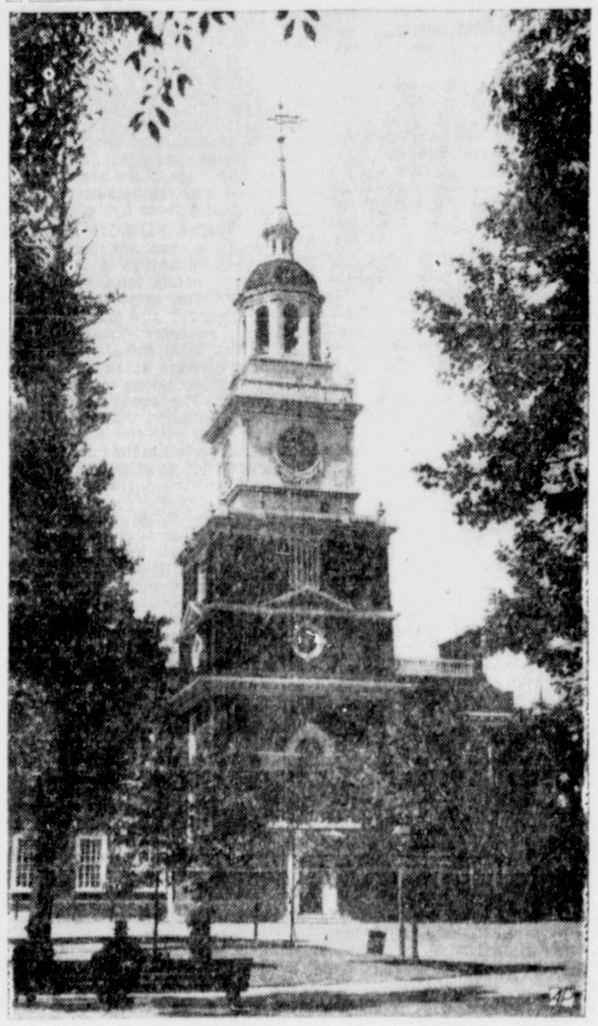
Approval came after two days of debate as to its wording, held behind closed doors in the scandalously expensive State House of Pennsylvania. (It cost $28,000 to build.) The windows were open, however, and in streamed swarms of flies from a nearby livery stable to assail the silk-stockinged legs of the perspiring delegates.

The complete break with Britain coincides with the receipt of dispatches saying that British General Howe has landed a large army of Redcoats on Sandy Hook and is marching on New York city.

The declaration ratifies and puts into specific form the action taken by Congress on July 2 when it passed the independence resolution introduced by Virginia's handsome Richard Henry Lee.

The document, written by scholarly "Long Tom" Jefferson, 33-year-old freckled-faced delegate from Virginia, sets forth that "governments are instituted to secure the inalienable rights of men to life, liberty and the pursuit of happiness".

It goes on to say that "whenever any government becomes destructive of these ends, it is the right of the people to alter or abolish it and to institute new government, laying its foundations on such principles . . . as shall seem most likely to effect their safety and happiness."



In 1776 the Pennsylvania State House was a symbol of extravagance in public building. It cost $28,000. On July 4 that year the building was the scene of events which brought new fame and a new name—Independence Hall. This is how the building appears today.

The declaration asserts that the states "have full power to levy war, conclude peace, contract alliances, establish commerce and do all other things that independent states may of right do."

The declaration was signed tonight by the president of the Congress, wealthy John Hancock of Massachusetts. Hancock, writing his name in large letters, said: "There, John Bull may read my name without spectacles."

Hancock's signature was attested by Charles Thomson, secretary of the Congress. The 50 odd individual members of the congress probably will sign the document at an early date.

Copies of the declaration will be sent to the several assemblies, conventions, councils of safety, and to General George Washington and the several commanding officers for reading to the continental troops. There is talk also of holding a great celebration of independence in the State House on July 8.

It seems that the bell in the tower of the State House was rung prematurely this afternoon. About 2 o'clock a boy on watch below shouted to the old bellman in the tower above: "Ring". Final approval of the declaration, however, was not made until this evening.

The original draft of the document as it came from the committee of five, headed by Jefferson, was amended somewhat. A notable excision was a passage charging the King with carrying on the slave trade and with refusing to allow American legislatures to suppress it.

Members contended it was inconsistent to arraign the king for doing something that some of the colonies were carrying on so energetically. During the debate Jefferson never said a word in defense of his own work, but he winced as he saw some of his most cherished phrases on liberty eliminated.

The enthusiasm displayed the day before yesterday by the oratorical, rotund John Adams of the independence resolution was still undimmed tonight.

"The second day of July will be the most memorable epoch in the history of America," said Adams. "I am apt to believe that it will be celebrated by succeeding generations as the great anniversary festival."

Delegate Abraham Clark, of New Jersey, said, "Our Congress is an august assembly, and can they support the declaration now on the anvil, they will be the greatest assembly on earth."

That Clark, however, is somewhat dubious over the outcome of today's action is indicated by the fact that he told a colleague he didn't know whether his title would turn out to be "honorable" or "dishonorable".

"Perhaps," he said, "our Congress will be exalted on a high gallows. The issue of the war will settle it."

West doubled in order to force North and South to disclose which type of hand the no-trumper was. North redoubled, of course, showing real honor trick strength. This system incorporates an artificial club bid to show a hand containing about three and one-half honor tricks. Partner is forced to respond and any response other than one dimamond shows about two tricks. Here is an example of the use of the Vanderbilt club convention.

Despite his long strong club suit, North must not bid two clubs over the conventional club bid by South. He must respond with one diamond, to show less than two honor tricks. But having done this duty, he is entitled to make a jump takeout over one no trump.

South realizes at once, after hearing the diamond response, that North cannot hold two aces. Therefore a slam appears impossible, and South must put on the brakes no matter how strongly North bids. If North has one ace and a void, he must make up his own mind about the slam. Hence, over four clubs South is careful not to indulge in any slam try such as four no trump.

It is too difficult to stop at the right contract of five after a slam try. The simple raise to five clubs says, "As you won't agree to stop at three no trump, I will play five clubs, but I can't propose any higher contract."

Let's have a "SAFE AND SANE" 4th ... 5th and 6th

A FEW YEARS BACK America concentrated on the idea of a "Safe and Sane Fourth of July". Through the earnest effort of public-spirited citizens, and law enforcement agencies ... the children of America are far safer on Independence Day.

We've saved the children from their own carelessness. Now let's have a "safe and sane" 4th, 5th and 6th of July on the highways!

Over this three-day Independence Day weekend . . . let's make a real start toward reducing the holiday toll on Pennsylvania highways. It can be done if you do your part. Before you start anywhere, be sure your car is in good mechanical condition . . . that its brakes, tires and lights are in perfect trim. On your way . . . there and back . . . drive carefully, courteously, completely in control of your car every split-second!

Watch for children on the roads . . . going on picnics . . . playing ball. Keep under fifty . . . and keep on your own side of the road at all times. Allow plenty of time for your trip. You know now that traffic will be heavy . . . so plan now to start early . . . to use the less-travelled roads wherever and whenever possible.

Be a good American on this great American holiday by driving safely and sanely on the 4th, 5th and 6th . . . and throughout the year.

Want a build-your-own-personality frock? A style that's simple enough for daytime wear with a trim hat; soft enough for dress up evenings with a frou-frou bonnet? Here's the answer in Pattern 4681, a design that's typically Anne Adams in individual style and easy making. The front and back paneling of the dress together with the high-placed, double-scalloped front seam give you divinely slim, smooth lines everywhere. Above the seam the bodice panels are soft-cut and gathered, with more gathering below the curving, graceful yokes. An optional feature is a self-fabric or ribbon belt. You might try the front panels in bold contrast for a dramatic effect.

Pattern 4681 is available in misses' and women's sizes 12, 14, 16, 18, 20, 30, 32, 34, 36, 38 and 40. Size 16 takes 3⅞ yards 39 inch fabric.

Eleanor Jean Baxter and Alfred W. Mullhaupt United in Quiet Wedding at the Bride's Home

In a simple service read at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Harry R. Baxter, 111 West street, at 6:30 o'clock last evening, their daughter, Eleanor Jean, became the bride of Alfred W. Mullhaupt, son of Mr. and Mrs. John Mullhaupt, 207 Frank street.

Dr. Thomas E. Colley, pastor of the First Methodist church, performed the ceremony, the vows being taken before banked ferns and summer flowers. The double ring service was used.

Miss Charlotta Erickson, aunt of the bride, played a 15-minute recital of lovely bridal music and the traditional wedding music. Just before the ceremony, she played "At Dawning" by Cadman and "O Perfect Love" by Barnby. While the ceremony was being performed, she played softly the Brahms "Berceuse", "Song to the Evening Star" by Wagner and "Traumerei" by Schumann.

The bride's floor length gown was of taffeta in a light blue shade and sandals were of gold color. Her lovely arm bouquet was of larkspur and delphinium in shades of blue.

She was given in marriage by her father and attended by Miss Genevieve Lagerblad. The maid of honor's long frock was of aqua taffeta, with which she wore silver slippers, and larkspur and delphinium formed her corsage.

William Brader was best man for Mr. Mullhaupt.

About 40 relatives and close friends were invited for the reception which followed immediately in the home. Appointments for the bride's table were carried out with baskets of hydrangeas, delphinium and pink roses. White candles flanked the three-tiered wedding cake which was topped with a miniature bridal couple.

For receiving, the bride's mother wore blue flowered crepe and a corsage of yellow roses with white spray.

For a wedding trip to Harrisburg and Washington, D. C., Mrs. Mullhaupt chose an ensemble of black and white, with white accessories. They will be at home after July 7 at 215 Pennsylvania avenue, east.

Both young people are graduates of the local high school, the bride having been employed by the G. C. Murphy Comany since June commencement, and Mr. Mullhaupt, member of the Class of 1938, having employment at Struthers-Wells.

The bride-elect has been complimented by her mother and sister, Mrs. Everett Hagberg; Miss Lagerblad and Miss Marcia Baxter; Mr. and Mrs. Emerson Baxter.

Baptist Pastor Delivers Excellent Address For Conservatory's Annual Commencement

Dr. James A. Davidson, pastor of the First Baptist church, speaking last evening at the 35th annual commencement exercises of the Warren Conservatory of Music, delivered a timely and interesting address on the advantages of American life and the thankfulness with which citizens of this country should view our excellent system of democracy.

The speaker praised this country's advantages in education, religion and the arts and expressed the hope that everyone will fully appreciate these wonderful opportunities.

The exercises were attended by a fair-sized audience and program numbers were thoroughly enjoyed.

Following the invocation by Dr. Davidson, Margaret Blick, senior, played with very good expression the York-Bowen "Nocturne." Betty Foster, another member of this year's class, offered the Porter "Prelude in D Minor", exhibiting a fine positive grasp of requirements for this stately composition.

Roger Webster was accompanied by Edith Haines Kuester for two pleasing baritone solos, singing with fine dramatic effect the German "Big Steamers" and displaying a splendid tone, good poise and dignity in Griffes "Eldorado."

Martha Hultberg, third graduate for this term, chose Lecuona's "Malaguena" and brought to it a good technique coupled with great power and brilliancy.

A vigorous manner especially befitting the first movement of the Vivaldi Concerto was shown in the playing of James Shortt, Jr., violinist, whose accompaniments were capably played by Lillian Larsen, faculty member.

Elanore Klinestiver, completing her post-graduate work in piano, played two movements of the "Emperor" Concerto by Beethoven, showing a fine technique and adequate grasp of this great work. Miss Larsen furnished an excellent second piano part.

Dr. LeRoy B. Campbell, head of the Conservatory, presented diplomas to the graduates and Dr. Davidson pronounced the benediction.

The next recital event at the Conservatory will be on July 18, when Lillian Louise Dornheim, daughter of Rev. and Mrs. H. E. Dornheim, of Beaver Falls, will give her junior piano program. Her father is a former pastor of the First Evangelical church here and Miss Dornheim has continued her Conservatory studies.

the service men and defense workers, has been heartily endorsed by men and women from every walk of life.

HOW TO CONTRIBUTE

U. S. O. contributions may be made by mail to H. B. Meacham, Treasurer U. S. O., 201 Warren National Bank Bldg., or may be taken in person to headquarters of that address. Volunteer workers will be assigned to the various plants and offices, and county communities will have representatives.

A Warren resident today recalled that Arthur Guy Empey, famous World War hero and author of "Over the Top" and "First Call," was enthusiastic over the spirit of Warren citizens when he made an address here during the first World War. Empey spoke in the Library Theatre and asked for contributions to buy smokes for the soldiers. It took a Warren audience only fifteen minutes to fill two large wash tubs with bills and coins.

During the campaign, volunteer workers will make short talks in stores, offices and industries, briefly outlining the purposes of the U. S. O. In many instances, pamphlets will be distributed and an opportunity to study the U. S. O. will be given before actual contributions are asked for.

Warren is among the localities which got away to a late start in the U. S. O. campaign, but in those centers which have completed their work or have reached the midway mark, committee report gratifying success, and this county's response to the plea is expected to equal or better the standards already set.

"In occupied regions conditions must be made unbearable for the enemy and all his accomplices. They must be hounded and annihilated at every step and all their measures frustrated."

The speech, broadcast at 6 a. m. (10 p. m. Wednesday EST) and repeated at intervals during the day on public loudspeaker systems and on house radios, marked the first time the Russian people had heard Stalin's voice since 1936 when he announced the constitution.

Asserting that "millions of the masses of our people will rise," Stalin, speaking in measured tones, announced that workers in Leningrad and Moscow already had started the organization of thousands into peoples' armies to support the Red Army and urged similar action in "every city under threat of invasion".

He expressed gratitude to Britain and the United States and referred to the people of Europe and America as "loyal allies".

"Our war for the fredom of our country," he said, "will merge with the struggle of the peoples of Europe and America for their independence, for democratic liberties. x x x"

Broadcasting only a short time after a Red Army communique acknowledged that Nazi spearheads were less than 400 miles from Moscow, Stalin declared that "history shows that there are no invincible armies and never have been." He recalled that Russians once beat Napoleon.

He told his people that it was Hitler who had broken the non-aggression pact between Russia and Germany but that the signing of it was not an error on the part of the Soviets. In the first place, he said, Russia in love of peace could not turn down a treaty even when offered "by such fiends and cannibals as Hitler and Ribbentrop".

In the second place, he continued, it gained Russia year and half "opportunity of preparing its forces to repulse Fascist Germany should she risk an attack on our country despite the pact".

New York, July 3—(AP)—The German radio commenting today on Soviet Premier Stalin's morning address said "the speech of the Russian dictator has a striking resemblance to a speech of the French Premier Reynaud when the German forces had broken through the Maginot line".

The comment was heard by CBS.

"x x x The simple fact that Stalin saw it necessary personally to go to the microphone," the German radio said, "is a clear indication of how nervous the Kremlin is today."

Want a build-your-own-personality frock? A style that's simple enough for daytime wear with a trim hat; soft enough for dress up evenings with a frou-frou bonnet? Here's the answer in Pattern 4681, a design that's typically Anne Adams in individual style and easy making. The front and back paneling of the dress together with the high-placed, double-scalloped front seam give you divinely slim, smooth lines everywhere. Above the seam the bodice panels are soft-cut and gathered, with more gathering below the curving, graceful yokes. An optional feature is a self-fabric or ribbon belt. You might try the front panels in bold contrast for a dramatic effect.

Pattern 4681 is available in misses' and women's sizes 12, 14, 16, 18, 20, 30, 32, 34, 36, 38 and 40. Size 16 takes 3⅝ yards 39 inch fabric.

Eleanor Jean Baxter and Alfred W. Mullhaupt United in Quiet Wedding at the Bride's Home

In a simple service read at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Harry R. Baxter, 111 West street, at 6:30 o'clock last evening, their daughter, Eleanor Jean, became the bride of Alfred W. Mullhaupt, son of Mr. and Mrs. John Mullhaupt, 207 Frank street.

Dr. Thomas E. Colley, pastor of the First Methodist church, performed the ceremony, the vows being taken before banked ferns and summer flowers. The double ring service was used.

Miss Charlotta Erickson, aunt of the bride, played a 15-minute recital of lovely bridal music and the traditional wedding music. Just before the ceremony, she played "At Dawning" by Cadman and "O Perfect Love" by Barnby. While the ceremony was being performed, she played softly the Brahms "Berceuse", "Song to the Evening Star" by Wagner and "Traumerei" by Schumann.

The bride's floor length gown was of taffeta in a light blue shade and sandals were of gold color. Her lovely arm bouquet was of larkspur and delphinium in shades of blue.

She was given in marriage by her father and attended by Miss Genevieve Lagerblad. The maid of honor's long frock was of aqua taffeta, with which she wore silver slippers, and larkspur and delphinium formed her corsage.

William Brader was best man for Mr. Mullhaupt.

About 40 relatives and close friends were invited for the reception which followed immediately in the home. Appointments for the bride's table were carried out with baskets of hydrangeas, delphinium and pink roses. White candles flanked the three-tiered wedding cake which was topped with a miniature bridal couple.

For receiving, the bride's mother wore blue flowered crepe and a corsage of yellow roses with white spray.

For a wedding trip to Harrisburg and Washington, D. C., Mrs. Mullhaupt chose an ensemble of black and white, with white accessories. They will be at home after July 7 at 215 Pennsylvania avenue, east.

Both young people are graduates of the local high school, the bride having been employed by the G. C. Murphy Comany since June commencement, and Mr. Mullhaupt, member of the Class of 1938, having employment at Struthers-Wells.

The bride-elect has been complimented by her mother and sister, Mrs. Everett Hagberg; Miss Lagerblad and Miss Marcia Baxter; Mr. and Mrs. Emerson Baxter.

Baptist Pastor Delivers Excellent Address For Conservatory's Annual Commencement

Dr. James A. Davidson, pastor of the First Baptist church, speaking last evening at the 35th annual commencement exercises of the Warren Conservatory of Music, delivered a timely and interesting address on the advantages of American life and the thankfulness with which citizens of this country should view our excellent system of democracy.

The speaker praised this country's advantages in education, religion and the arts and expressed the hope that everyone will fully appreciate these wonderful opportunities.

The exercises were attended by a fair-sized audience and program numbers were thoroughly enjoyed.

Following the invocation by Dr. Davidson, Margaret Blick, senior, played with very good expression the York-Bowen "Nocturne." Betty Foster, another member of this year's class, offered the Porter "Prelude in D Minor", exhibiting a fine positive grasp of requirements for this stately composition.

Roger Webster was accompanied by Edith Haines Kuester for two pleasing baritone solos, singing with fine dramatic effect the German "Big Steamers" and displaying a splendid tone, good poise and dignity in Griffes "Eldorado."

Martha Hultberg, third graduate for this term, chose Lecuona's "Malaguena" and brought to it a good technique coupled with great power and brilliancy.

A vigorous manner especially befitting the first movement of the Vivaldi Concerto was shown in the playing of James Shortt, Jr., violinist, whose accompaniments were capably played by Lillian Larsen, faculty member.

Elanore Klinestiver, completing her post-graduate work in piano, played two movements of the "Emperor" Concerto by Beethoven, showing a fine technique and adequate grasp of this great work. Miss Larsen furnished an excellent second piano part.

Dr. LeRoy B. Campbell, head of the Conservatory, presented diplomas to the graduates and Dr. Davidson pronounced the benediction.

The next recital event at the Conservatory will be on July 18, when Lillian Louise Dornheim, daughter of Rev. and Mrs. H. E. Dornheim, of Beaver Falls, will give her junior piano program. Her father is a former pastor of the First Evangelical church here and Miss Dornheim has continued her Conservatory studies.

the service men and defense workers, has been heartily endorsed by men and women from every walk of life.

HOW TO CONTRIBUTE

U. S. O. contributions may be made by mail to H. B. Meacham, Treasurer U. S. O., 201 Warren National Bank Bldg., or may be taken in person to headquarters of that address. Volunteer workers will be assigned to the various plants and offices, and county communities will have representatives.

A Warren resident today recalled that Arthur Guy Empey, famous World War hero and author of "Over the Top" and "First Call," was enthusiastic over the spirit of Warren citizens when he made an address here during the first World War. Empey spoke in the Library Theatre and asked for contributions to buy smokes for the soldiers. It took a Warren audience only fifteen minutes to fill two large wash tubs with bills and coins.

During the campaign, volunteer workers will make short talks in stores, offices and industries, briefly outlining the purposes of the U. S. O. In many instances, pamphlets will be distributed and an opportunity to study the U. S. O. will be given before actual contributions are asked for.

Warren is among the localities which got away to a late start in the U. S. O. campaign, but in those centers which have completed their work or have reached the midway mark, committee report gratifying success, and this county's response to the plea is expected to equal or better the standards already set.

The speech, broadcast at 6 a. m. (10 p. m. Wednesday EST) and repeated at intervals during the day on public loudspeaker systems and on house radios, marked the first time the Russian people had heard Stalin's voice since 1936 when he announced the constitution.

Asserting that "millions of the masses of our people will rise," Stalin, speaking in measured tones, announced that workers in Leningrad and Moscow already had started the organization of thousands into peoples' armies to support the Red Army and urged similar action in "every city under threat of invasion".

He expressed gratitude to Britain and the United States and referred to the people of Europe and America as "loyal allies".

"Our war for the fredom of our country," he said, "will merge with the struggle of the peoples of Europe and America for their independence, for democratic liberties. x x x"

Broadcasting only a short time after a Red Army communique acknowledged that Nazi spearheads were less than 400 miles from Moscow, Stalin declared that "history shows that there are no invincible armies and never have been." He recalled that Russians once beat Napoleon.

He told his people that it was Hitler who had broken the non-aggression pact between Russia and Germany but that the signing of it was not an error on the part of the Soviets. In the first place, he said, Russia in love of peace could not turn down a treaty even when offered "by such fiends and cannibals as Hitler and Ribbentrop".

HEARTBREAK HONEYMOON

by WATKIN[illegible]RT

YESTERDAY: It was too good to last. Luella and Henry Pell just have been married, and just have settled in a charming New York apartment, while Henry settles himself in his new and very good job. And then Marie Mason calls up, and asks that they hear her broadcast, Marie being the hometown girl that Henry almost married. Now they have met Marie after her broadcast, and Luella is thinking about former days.

Chapter Six

Sixty-Five Floors Up

MARIE kissed Luella, and she kissed Henry, while a lot of people looked on with amused interest.

"Gosh, Marie," said Henry in a breathless fashion, "you were great! Boy, was I proud of you!"

"So was I," said Luella. "But I kept thinking about the time you sang a solo in the Methodist church choir and forgot your words. Remember?"

"Yes, I remember," said Marie. "But there's no time for reminiscing."

"And the time," said Luella, "when you forgot to take off your apron, and there it was when you got up to sing!"

Marie frowned. She turned to Tommy.

"Oh, Tommy, darling, I'm sorry!" she said, catching his hand. "Luella, Henry, this is Tommy." She laughed. "Formally speaking, Mr. and Mrs. Pell, this is Mr. McIntyre."

"Hello, Luella! Howdy, Henry!" said Tommy.

"Howdy, yourself," said Henry. Then, grinning, he looked at Luella, and said, "Say, 'howdy' to Tommy, honey."

"Howdy, Tommy!" said Luella.

Marie let her lovely eyes move over the three people gathered about her.

"This is one of the happiest moments of my life," she said. "My three dearest and best friends all here with me at one time! Now, let's get the elevator for the Rainbow Room. We're going to celebrate."

Tommy took Luella's arm, and Henry took Marie's, as they entered a car that shot them up toward the stars.

Sixty-five floors above the sidewalks of Manhattan, Marie demanded a table near the dance floor— and got it.

"Yes, Miss Mason," said the dignified man who met them. "Yes, Miss Mason. Right this way."

When they were seated, Tommy looked at Marie and smiled.

"Just like that!" he said. "And she gets what she wants."

"Like rubbing Aladdin's lamp," said Luella.

Marie shrugged. "In New York, my dears," she said, "one has to be demanding—or one gets lost under foot."

"Champagne cocktails for all of us," Tommy said then. "My treat—for old home week." He turned to Luella. "Oh," he said, "maybe you'd prefer something else, Luella. Marie always takes champagne cocktails, and so—"

"I've never tasted one," said Luella, "but I'm dying to."

"Then champagne cocktails it shall be!"

The waiter went away. General conversation began.

Luella could feel Tommy McIntyre's gaze upon her now and then.

He had a sort of puzzled, surprised look. "Probably expected to see a dumpy little country gal," she thought. She smiled to herself, rather liking the taste of the champagne, a beverage she had seen only in the movies.

"And so you really liked me?" Marie was saying to Henry.

"You were swell, Marie," said Henry—and Luella, hearing, had the feeling that she had heard Henry say those words at least a dozen times. "And while I watched you and listened, I kept remembering how you looked beside the river on the night when you told me you wanted a career more than anything else in the whole world. Remember?"

"Do I?" said Marie. "Of course I do."

Looking Back

AS IF she hadn't been remembering every moment of that night from the first glimpse she had got of Henry waiting for her there in New York's tall building. So handsome, so sure of himself, with his football shoulders, his narrow hips, his long straight legs, and the smile she would never forget if she lived to be a hundred and one years old.

She had rather dreaded meeting her two old friends in so public a place, not that she expected them to be boobs with hayseed in their hair, but fearful lest they be—well—not just quite right; small-townish, maybe small-townish trying to look sophisticated.

But it hadn't been that way at all. Henry was perfect, and even Luella looked a little like Park Avenue. Henry . . . Luella . . . but especially Henry.

"It was pretty decent of you, too," Henry was now saying, "to use that old song of mine. I certainly never expected to hear it sung over the radio."

"I thought you'd be pleased," said Marie. "It goes over well, too."

"Careful, Marie," Tommy warned good-naturedly. "Henry will be demanding royalties."

"Not Henry," said Marie. "He's willing for me to use it for the sake of old times. Aren't you, Henry?"

"You bet I am!" said Henry. He was flushed with excitement. "How about another round of cocktails?"

"Suits me," said Marie. "I've been a good little girl for a long time."

"I'm willing," said Tommy.

"I'll have another one too, Henry," said Luella.

Henry looked at her. "Listen, honey," he said, "don't disgrace me by landing under the table."

Luella didn't like that remark. "You watch your own likker, my darling," she retorted. "I'll take care of mine."

Tommy laughed. "Attagirl, Luella!" he cheered. "Never let a husband get the idea he can push you around."

"I'll remember that," said Marie. "In case I ever decide to marry you, Tommy, my lamb."

"There I go," said Tommy, "putting my foot in it again."

"Speaking of that song of mine," said Henry to Marie, "I've got some others. I used to write them during odd times. Maybe we can make some of them go over like the one you sang."

"We'll keep them in mind," said Marie. "I've got big plans for my radio career, and maybe some day I'll be coming to you for material."

"Say, I'd love that!" said Henry. "Maybe I can be a song writer on the side." He grinned. "You know, write songs in between selling real estate."

Tommy smiled at Luella. "Come on," he said, "let's dance."

"I'd love it," said Luella.

She would show Henry Pell he couldn't treat her like a child, turn patronizing. She'd not only dance with this good-looking young man, but she would also have as many cocktails as she chose to have.

She went to Tommy McIntyre's arms.

She was oddly lighthearted, and she liked the feeling.

They moved out upon the shining floor—she and Tommy.

"You Southern gals are jest natchul, bawn dancers, honey chile," said Tommy.

"Thank you, suh," said Luella. "You Yankee boys aren't so bad yo'selves. Ah likes dancing with you-all."

"Oh, us Yankees aren't so terrible once you get to know us." Tommy chuckled. "Although I hear that way down South you folks still think we have horns and forked tails."

"Yes," said Luella. "But that's way, way down South."

New Friend

AND somehow she began to feel that Tommy McIntyre was a very real person—sincere, sympathetic, understanding—and that in him she had found a genuine friend. She hoped so. For she had a pretty definite idea that she was going to need friends—good, solid ones.

Henry, coming in daily contact with important people down at his office, was steadily widening his circle of friends and acquaintances. But not so easy, staying alone in the apartment. And although Henry had referred to the wives of his business associates as women whom she would meet, be entertained by, and entertain, none of them had so far bothered to look her up.

Yes, she was going to need friends, and Tommy was a fine beginning.

"Why so silent, Luella?" Tommy asked. "I've always thought that you Southern girls never lacked for anything to say, that you always had a line."

"Just another false report about us," Luella replied. "Like the one about Southerners being lazy." She smiled up at him. "I was just doing some very, very feminine thinking. It wouldn't interest you in the least."

"Let me be the judge of that."

"No. . . There's no use."

"All right, lady. But I am interested in seeing more of the Pells—and often. Do you mind?"

"Goodness, gracious no!" said Luella. "I'll feel terribly if you don't see a lot of us. In fact, I'm already planning to have you and Marie up for dinner."

"One you cooked yourself?"

"Yes. How did know?"

"Oh, Marie told me about you. She said you were a little homebody, and loved to cook."

"Really?" said Luella. "Not a very flattering picture, I must say. Now I understand why you looked at me so queerly this evening."

"Did I look at you queerly?"

"You certainly did. You were probably looking for a flour smudge on my nose."

"Wrong!" said Tommy. "I was looking at you— intently but not queerly—because I was so delighted to discover a young woman who was able to cook a good meal, and yet look like something out of Vogueland when she stepped out in the evening to be gay."

Luella laughed happily.

"Tommy McIntyre, you've done me a peck of good saying that!" she said. "You've made my stock rise fifty percent—in my own estimation at least."

She glanced over her shoulder, saw Marie talking earnestly to Henry, while Henry listened with all that was in him, a sort of rapt expression on his good-looking face. "Let's go back to the others now," she said, not caring for the way Henry's and Marie's cheeks almost touched. "You really should dance with Marie, you know."

"All right, if you think so," said Tommy. He too glanced at the couple at the table. "However, Marie seems to be quite content with things as is!"

And he was right. Marie was content. That is she was content to have Henry there with her. She could not keep her feelings from showing in her eyes, nor the heartbeats from quickening when Henry's hand touched hers. Henry, seeing, understanding, did some wondering. "Good Lord," he thought, "does she still love me a little? Could I—even now—take her in my arms and kiss her?"

the full parity idea.

With Willkie's defeat some political dopesters thought AFBF was dead, but the organization went right on with its drive for full parity on the five basic crops, and what's more, put it over in what economy congressmen from non-agricultural districts call the greatest grab in the history of the American congress.

Today, the Farm Bureau Federation is rated as one of the most influential lobbies in Washington. AFBF sends telegrams to congressmen by the score, and it never misses a trick where the farmer's interests are concerned, operating on the simple philosophy that with everybody else getting something from the government, the farmer is entitled to his'n.

Its efforts tend to aid the big farmer more than the little farmer. AAA and the parity program favor the big farmer perhaps 10 to 1. SMA, Commodities Credit Corporation, Farm Security Administration look more towards aiding the small farmer. That's where the fundamental conflict is in the Department of Agriculture.

HEARTBREAK HONEYMOON

by WATKINS [illegible]

YESTERDAY: It was too good to last. Luella and Henry Pell just have been married, and just have settled in a charming New York apartment, while Henry settles himself in his new and very good job. And then Marie Mason calls up, and asks that they hear her broadcast, Marie being the hometown girl that Henry almost married. Now they have met Marie after her broadcast, and Luella is thinking about former days.

Chapter Six

Sixty-Five Floors Up

MARIE kissed Luella, and she kissed Henry, while a lot of people looked on with amused interest.

"Gosh, Marie," said Henry in a breathless fashion, "you were great! Boy, was I proud of you!"

"So was I," said Luella. "But I kept thinking about the time you sang a solo in the Methodist church choir and forgot your words. Remember?"

"Yes, I remember," said Marie. "But there's no time for reminiscing."

"And the time," said Luella, "when you forgot to take off your apron, and there it was when you got up to sing!"

Marie frowned. She turned to Tommy.

"Oh, Tommy, darling, I'm sorry!" she said, catching his hand. "Luella, Henry, this is Tommy." She laughed. "Formally speaking, Mr. and Mrs. Pell, this is Mr. McIntyre."

"Hello, Luella! Howdy, Henry!" said Tommy.

"Howdy, yourself," said Henry. Then, grinning, he looked at Luella, and said, "Say, 'howdy' to Tommy, honey."

"Howdy, Tommy!" said Luella. Marie let her lovely eyes move over the three people gathered about her.

"This is one of the happiest moments of my life," she said. "My three dearest and best friends all here with me at one time! Now, let's get the elevator for the Rainbow Room. We're going to celebrate."

Tommy took Luella's arm, and Henry took Marie's, as they entered a car that shot them up toward the stars.

Sixty-five floors above the sidewalks of Manhattan, Marie demanded a table near the dance floor— and got it.

"Yes, Miss Mason," said the dignified man who met them. "Yes, Miss Mason. Right this way."

When they were seated, Tommy looked at Marie and smiled.

"Just like that!" he said. "And she gets what she wants."

"Like rubbing Aladdin's lamp," said Luella.

Marie shrugged. "In New York, my dears," she said, "one has to be demanding—or one gets lost under foot."

"Champagne cocktails for all of us," Tommy said then. "My treat—for old home week." He turned to Luella. "Oh," he said, "maybe you'd prefer something else, Luella. Marie always takes champagne cocktails, and so—"

"I've never tasted one," said Luella, "but I'm dying to."

"Then champagne cocktails it shall be!"

The waiter went away. General conversation began.

Luella could feel Tommy McIntyre's gaze upon her now and then.

He had a sort of puzzled, surprised look. "Probably expected to see a dumpy little country gal," she thought. She smiled to herself, rather liking the taste of the champagne, a beverage she had seen only in the movies.

"We'll keep them in mind," said Marie. "I've got big plans for my radio career, and maybe some day I'll be coming to you for material."

"Say, I'd love that!" said Henry. "Maybe I can be a song writer on the side." He grinned. "You know, write songs in between selling real estate."

Tommy smiled at Luella. "Come on," he said, "let's dance."

"I'd love it," said Luella.

She would show Henry Pell he couldn't treat her like a child, turn patronizing. She'd not only dance with this good-looking young man, but she would also have as many cocktails as she chose to have.

She went to Tommy McIntyre's arms.

She was oddly lighthearted, and she liked the feeling.

They moved out upon the shining floor—she and Tommy.

"You Southern gals are jest natchul, bawn dancers, honey chile," said Tommy.

"Thank you, suh," said Luella. "You Yankee boys aren't so bad yo'selves. Ah likes dancing with you-all."

"Oh, us Yankees aren't so terrible once you get to know us," Tommy chuckled. "Although I hear that way down South you folks still think we have horns and forked tails."

"Yes," said Luella. "But that's way, way down South."

New Friend

AND somehow she began to feel that Tommy McIntyre was a very real person—sincere, sympathetic, understanding—and that in him she had found a genuine friend. She hoped so. For she had a pretty definite idea that she was going to need friends—good, solid ones.

Henry, coming in daily contact with important people down at his office, was steadily widening his circle of friends and acquaintances. But not so easy, staying alone in the apartment. And although Henry had referred to the wives of his business associates as women whom she would meet, be entertained by, and entertain, none of them had so far bothered to look her up.

Yes, she was going to need friends, and Tommy was a fine beginning.

"Why so silent, Luella?" Tommy asked. "I've always thought that you Southern girls never lacked for anything to say, that you always had a line."

"Just another false report about us," Luella replied. "Like the one about Southerners being lazy." She smiled up at him. "I was just doing some very, very feminine thinking. It wouldn't interest you in the least."

"Let me be the judge of that."

"No. . . There's no use."

"All right, lady. But I am interested in seeing more of the Pells—and often. Do you mind?"

"Goodness, gracious no!" said Luella. "I'll feel terribly if you don't see a lot of us. In fact, I'm already planning to have you and Marie up for dinner."

"One you cooked yourself?"

"Yes. How did know?"

"Oh, Marie told me about you. She said you were a little homebody, and loved to cook."

"Really?" said Luella. "Not a very flattering picture, I must say. Now I understand why you looked at me so queerly this evening."

"Did I look at you queerly?"

"You certainly did. You were probably looking for a flour smudge on my nose."

"Wrong!" said Tommy. "I was looking at you— intently but not queerly—because I was so delighted to discover a young woman who was able to cook a good meal, and yet look like something out of Vogueland when she stepped out in the evening to be gay."

Luella laughed happily.

"Tommy McIntyre, you've done me a peck of good saying that!" she said. "You've made my stock rise fifty percent—in my own estimation at least."

She glanced over her shoulder, saw Marie talking earnestly to Henry, while Henry listened with all that was in him, a sort of rapt expression on his good-looking face. "Let's go back to the others now," she said, not caring for the way Henry's and Marie's cheeks almost touched. "You really should dance with Marie, you know."

"All right, if you think so," said Tommy. He too glanced at the couple at the table. "However, Marie seems to be quite content with things as is!"

And he was right. Marie was content. That is she was content to have Henry there with her. She could not keep her feelings from showing in her eyes, nor the heartbeats from quickening when Henry's hand touched hers. Henry, seeing, understanding, did some wondering. "Good Lord," he thought, "does she still love me a little? Could I—even now—take her in my arms and kiss her?"

the full parity idea.

With Willkie's defeat some political dopesters thought AFBF was dead, but the organization went right on with its drive for full parity on the five basic crops, and what's more, put it over in what economy congressmen from nonagricultural districts call the greatest grab in the history of the American congress.

Today, the Farm Bureau Federation is rated as one of the most influential lobbies in Washington. AFBF sends telegrams to congressmen by the score, and it never misses a trick where the farmer's interests are concerned, operating on the simple philosophy that with everybody else getting something from the government, the farmer is entitled to his'n.

Its efforts tend to aid the big farmer more than the little farmer. AAA and the parity program favor the big farmer perhaps 10 to 1. SMA, Commodities Credit Corporation, Farm Securitty Administration look more towards aiding the small farmer. That's where the fundamental conflict is in the Department of Agriculture.

Dear Mom:

Well, here it is another weekend—my second in the U. S. Army—and I'm not a General yet. But give me time.

As a matter of fact, I have too much time on my hands—not on weekdays, but on evenings and weekends.

You see, the nearest village is 5 miles away. And when you get there, all you find is a general store, a garage and a canning factory—nowhere to go for any good clean fun, unless you find a smoke-filled juke joint on the way.

Well, Mom, in that connection, there's a big favor you can do me. It's about this U. S. O. drive. They're trying to raise $10,765,000 to run clubs for us, outside of camp. Places with lounge rooms, dance floors, games, writing rooms. Places you can go for a bite to eat without paying a king's ransom.

Now, I know you don't have an idle million lying around, but if you could get the family interested and some of the neighbors, and if that happened all over the country, the U. S. O. could raise $10,765,000 over night.

Besides, there are a lot of people in this country who feel we are doing our bit, and they'd like to do theirs, and this is certainly their chance.

I'd appreciate it a lot, Mom, and so would every other mother's son in the U. S. Army and Navy.

Love,
Bill.

Yanks Tear Red Sox As DiMaggio Sets All-Time Record

obo Newsom Edges hisox For 1-0 Win; eds Lose To Bucs

BY JUDSON BAILEY
ociated Press Sports Writer

oker-faced Joe DiMaggio, the test player, excluding pitchers, he present era of baseball, has hed his goal of a new all-time or league record for hitting in onsecutive games, and now can shooting for another prize—the le crown of batting."

his bauble is the three-way mpionship in percentage hitting, e runs and runs batted in and ne of the most elusive batting rs in the game.

the last 15 years it has been only by the immortal Lou rig, who, incidentally, is to be norialized by the New York kees and fans in a ceremony in kee Stadium before tomorrow's ble-header. Gehrig captured all e in 1934, when he hit .363, col- ed 49 home runs and batted in tallies.

abe Ruth was never able to hit target. Rogers Hornsby did it e in the National League, in and 1925. Other heroes of the might have achieved it, ex- that runs batted in were not rded until the last two decades. iMaggio's blow yesterday to ak the 44-year-old mark of Wil- Keeler was a sizzling home run, 18th of the season, and pre- ed his leadership in this depart- nt.

batting in three runs to help Yanks rip open the Boston Red 8-4, he also lifted himself with- our "RBI" of the league leader, mmate Charley Keller, who hit 17th homer in yesterday's game. oe's batting average of .348 is points behind the .401 pace of ton's Ted Williams, but their ks have been sliding closer to- her for weeks.

esterday's victory was New k's sixth straight and 20th in games in a furious surge that made the rest of the league ggy and given the Yanks a lead hree full games over the Cleve- d Indians, who were idle yester-he Philadelphia Athletics clipped Washington Senators 7-6 on Johnson's 17th home run in tenth inning and Detroit nosed the Chicago White Sox 1-0 in a ctacular night game pitching l between Bobo Newsom and Dietrich.

he tottering Tiger ace allowed three scattered hits in one of best performances of his varied eer and preserved the one run rgin given him in the first in- g by Pat Mullin's single and ly York's double. Dietrich gave five hits in losing.

n the National League, the oklyn Dodgers punished the ls for Tuesday's setback by ing a 9-3 decision and chopping lead of the idle St. Louis Car- als to half a game.

Pittsburgh beat the Cincinnati ls 8-3 for Paul Derringer's 10th s of the season as Maurice Van bays and Elbie Fletcher came ough with timely hits.

The Boston Braves and New k Giants divided a double-head- with two four-hit pitching exhi- ons. Dick Errickson and Tom rly shared the mound assignment winning the first game 5-4, and Lohrman retaliated with a 6-0 tout in the nightcap.

"W's" ARRIVE

The Warren High School track and baseball letters, which were ordered nearly three weeks before the close of school for the summer, and were delayed for quite a period, have finally arrived at the high school and all players who earned their awards may call at the school any time and receive their coveted "W's," it was announced this week by Director of Athletics J. B. Leidig.

INDIANS BOUGHT IT

The federal government did not give the Cherokee Indians their reservation in North Carolina. The Indians purchased it from private owners in 1851.

ZIVIC WINS IN TENTH BY T. K. O. IN DAVIS BOUT

BY GAYLE TALBOT

New York, July 3—(AP)—Bummy Davis, the unpopular little waif from Brooklyn, can go back and tell his Army buddies in Texas that he put up a courageous fight before he bowed to Fritzie Zivic last night at the Polo Grounds.

In fact, the ringside regulars were trying to remember any boxer who had absorbed a worse licking in a local ring just before Bummy finally sagged against the ropes in the 10th round and signified that he had taken enough.

Bummy's face was smeared with blood and he was helpless, his head and body being torn by the machine gun punches of the welterweight champion, when Referee Arthur Donovan called it off.

Zivic did an artistic job, taking full revenge for the foul shots that Davis poured into his trunks at their first meeting last November. It was so one-sided that the crowd began moving out before the scrap was half over. That is unusual for an audience that has paid up to $11.00 for a ringside chair.

All Davis had was a left hook, and he was helpless in the clinches. Zivic, who had waited eight months for another chance at Bummy, had just about everything, including a left jab that was in Bumy's face all night.

In the first round Zivic caught Bummy wide open and chopped him to the canvas with a right to the jaw. The count had reached seven when the bell rang to end the round and gave Bummy another chance. Otherwise it might have ended right then. Zivic never knocked his man down again, but what he did was worse, probably.

Round after round he jabbed, jabbed Bummy in his swollen face, taking practically nothing in return. Only one round was credited to Davis, and that was based more or less on the law of reasonable doubt. Zivic looked like a great fighter.

The disappointing crowd of 8,868 paid a gross of $36,185.

Veto Greto, fifteen year old youngster, hurled the St. Joseph's Boys' Club to a victory in a City League softball game last night over the K. of C. on the West Side diamond by a score of 8 to 2.

Slightly nervous at the outset, the youthful pitching ace tossed a seven hitter at the Caseys, keeping those bingles well scattered except for the first and fourth cantos when the K. of C. scored single tallies.

The Boys' Club supported Greto with two runs in each of the first two innings, one more in the third, and then they polished the job with three counters in the fifth.

The victory put the winners in second place and the losers fell into the cellar of the league.

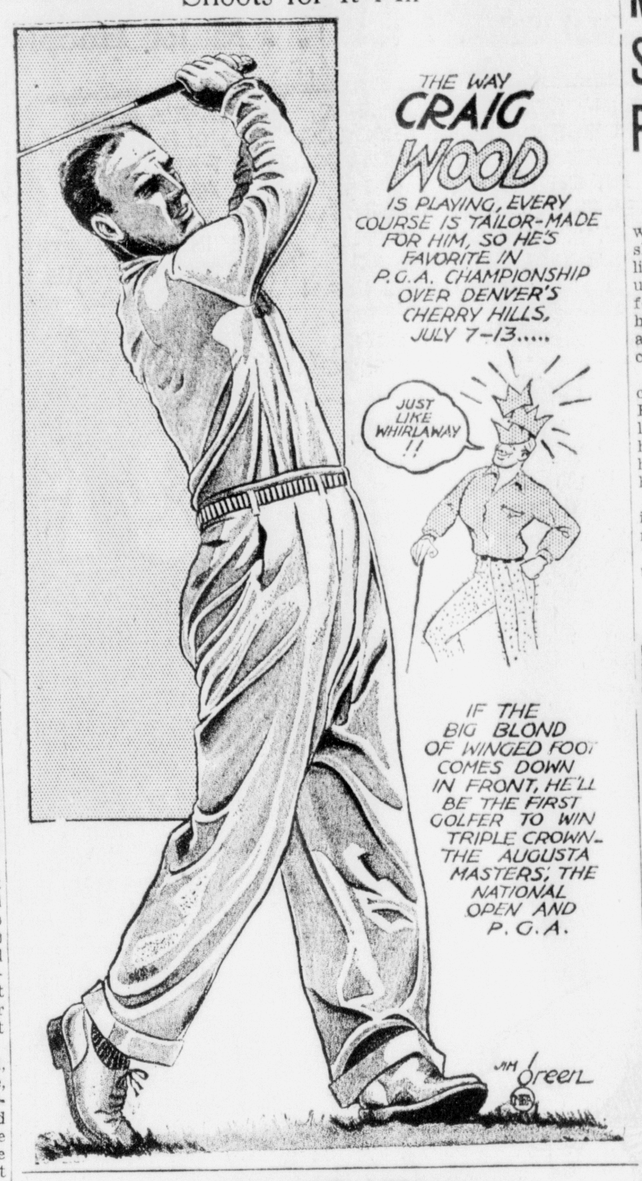
Shoots for It All



Baseball, with all of its managers, front offices, players, farms, scouts, etc., seems to be going steadily money mad. It's a funny thing, too, because they call old timers who are still in the game as coaches or pilots, experts. Yet, twenty years ago who would have given five grand as a bonus to any young rookie about whom very little was known, let alone the $45,000 that Dick Wakefield and Bennie McCoy drew this year and last for signing? McCoy had experience, but he hasn't exactly shown himself to be worth that much dough. Wakefield is still a mystery—he may be good and then again he may flop. But there is no money-back guarantee to the Tigers if the rookie outfielder doesn't please, no thirty-day trial, just a gift of forty-five thousand lettuce leaves to one lucky kid who may have a dozen equals around the country, some who never will even break into the majors, and others who may, but probably not with such a pleasant debut. Then there's Johnny Gee, the biggest laugh in modern baseball when you stop to consider his price tag. Gee didn't get a bonus, but seventy-five grand was a wicked price to pay when the big Bucco pitcher hasn't earned his salt in two seasons now.

And the most comical part about the whole money angle is the annual holdouts in the spring. As the years go along, salaries keep getting bigger. This spring there was the Feller-Newsom feud as to which was the higher paid pitcher. Very few players in the major leagues are worth more than $15,000 per, and that's very good money. But if a batter hits .371 for a season when he was only expected to do about .325 or .350, he's in the front office bright and early in the spring for a salary boost. That's fine, but if the same batter who wants a bigger slice for a good season would be as quick to admit he deserves a cut following a poor campaign, baseball could once again concentrate on the game intsead of the money angle. However, it's not the players who are the fools, but the big financial guns behind them. And if you're looking for suckers these days, they're not hard to find. Just take a peek into organized baseball and you'll find a school of them.

Quickies . . . Lefty Gomez is sporting a new lid, acquired when a jubilant Yankee fan threw it away as Red Rolfe smacked a home run . . . Rookie George Archie is breaking in at third base for the Washington Nats, for who knows when Uncle Sam is going to call Buddy Lewis from the hot corner? . . . Between double-headers last Sunday, while Joe DiMaggio was breaking George Sisler's hitting mark, someone swiped his favorite bat . . . But it didn't stop the clouting DiMag . . . He used another one which he had designed and poled a hit his first time up in the nightcap . . . Out in Wenatchee, Wash., they're telling about their "real rally" in a baseball game . . . Wenatchee was trailing Tacoma 11 to 6 going into the last half of the ninth inning . . . But, starting with the head of the batting order, Wenatchee collected nine straight singles . . . Each regular—plus a pinch hitter for the pitcher—connected for a one-baser for six runs and the victory, which came with the bases still loaded and nobody out!

MRS. JOE LOUIS SEEKS DIVORCE FROM CHAMPION

Chicago, July 3—(AP)—Two weeks after a dinner for which she said "I cooked everything he liked in hopes we'd patch things up," Mrs. Joe Louis has filed suit for divorce from the world's heavyweight boxing champion. She alleged extreme and repeated cruelty.

In the action, filed yesterday in circuit court, she said the famous Brown Bomber dealt her "a violent blow in the mouth with his hand" on Jan. 2, 1941, and "hit her in the face and stepped on her ankle" April 19.

"We separated after that last incident," said Mrs. Louis, the former Marva Trotter of Chicago. "But two weeks ago we had dinner together. I fixed everything he

Goodyear Wingfoots Meet Morrison Crew Tomorrow Afternoon

Sports will hold the spotlight locally tomorrow in the observance and celebration of Independence Day. There'll be golf, a little tennis, swimming, etc., but the feature sports attraction will be the Akron Goodyear-National Forge baseball game at Wilder Field, Irvine, starting at two thirty o'clock tomorrow afternoon.

The Goodyears will bring a strong outfit to Irvine to match the Forge, and the Wingfoot club is fully as capable of giving the fans a fine baseball program as were the Warren, Ohio Ramblers, who put up two fine games against the Morrison aggregation last Sunday, according to reports and records from Ohio sources.

So for all baseball fans, it's easy and convenient to trek down to Irvine for the ball game. Unless bad weather forces postponement of the contest, it can be expected to be one of the finest games presented at Irvine this season.

Tentative lineups for both teams in tomorrow's fracas are as follows:

Akron Wingfoots: Captain Mel Rush, third base; Swope, first base; Bill McNenney, shortstop; Tom Porosky, center field; Paul Carroll, left field; Ike Harwell, right field; Jack Buttermore, catcher; Bus Simpson, second base or field; and their pitching ace, Carl "Lefty" Bement, who has won six and lost two in the Greater Cleveland League in which they play, and are currently leading the circuit.

BY GAYLE TALBOT

New York, July 3—(AP)—Bummy Davis, the unpopular little waif from Brooklyn, can go back and tell his Army buddies in Texas that he put up a courageous fight before he bowed to Fritzie Zivic last night at the Polo Grounds.

In fact, the ringside regulars were trying to remember any boxer who had absorbed a worse licking in a local ring just before Bummy finally sagged against the ropes in the 10th round and signified that he had taken enough.

Bummy's face was smeared with blood and he was helpless, his head and body being torn by the machine gun punches of the welterweight champion, when Referee Arthur Donovan called it off.

Zivic did an artistic job, taking full revenge for the foul shots that Davis poured into his trunks at their first meeting last November. It was so one-sided that the crowd began moving out before the scrap was half over. That is unusual for an audience that has paid up to $11.00 for a ringside chair.

All Davis had was a left hook, and he was helpless in the clinches. Zivic, who had waited eight months for another chance at Bummy, had just about everything, including a left jab that was in Bumy's face all night.

In the first round Zivic caught Bummy wide open and chopped him to the canvas with a right to the jaw. The count had reached seven when the bell rang to end the round and gave Bummy another chance. Otherwise it might have ended right then. Zivic never knocked his man down again, but what he did was worse, probably.

Round after round he jabbed, jabbed Bummy in his swollen face, taking practically nothing in return. Only one round was credited to Davis, and that was based more or less on the law of reasonable doubt. Zivic looked like a great fighter.

Sports Round-up

BY EDDIE BRIETZ

New York, July 3—What's this about Jimmy Foxx getting a cracked rib in a friendly wrestling match with Ted Williams in the Red Sox club house? The official announcement said Foxx received a torn cartilage when hit by a ball....But the grapevine says several of the Sox yelled "There goes the pennant," when Jimmy was pinned by Williams....Most promising girl golfer Patty Berg saw on her 50,000-mile tour was Louise Suggs of Olympia Springs, Ga.

Mebbe you notice that when Joe DiMaggio broke Willie Keeler's record of hitting safely in 44 consecutive games, it happened exactly 44 years after Wee Willie posted the mark....And Old Bill Dahlen, former Cub and Dodger shortstop, who held the record (42 games) prior to Keeler, was in the Yankee stadium to see Joe turn the trick.....

Today's Guest Star.

Art Cohn, Oakland Tribune: "Clark Shaughnessy, the well-known character builder, who has refused to capitalize on Stanford's Rose Bowl victory—except to act as Bob Hope's stooge on an air show, write a book, go on a speaking tour, conduct a coaching school and fill several other engagements—will (reluctantly, of course) appear on a weekly radio show this fall."....Amateurism Ltd., eh?

Sport Sprays.

Babe Ruth has holed in at Bretton Woods, N. H., for two weeks of golf.....Dizzy Dean can't make up his mind about that St. Louis sportscasting offer.... Golfers Jimmy Demaret and Ben Hogan begin a barnstorming tour of South America in October. Rich pickings to be had down there.... Here's a prediction: U. of San Francisco will organize a track team next spring with the famous Dink Templeton, former Stanford great, as coach....Solly Krieger, now a heavyweight, has parted company with Manager Pete Reilly and is handling his own business.....The Puerto Rican sports commission has revoked the $25 fine and one-year suspension it slapped on Satchel Paige, great negro pitcher, for "incivility" to an umpire....Trainer Sunny Jim Fitzsimmons has satisfied his life's ambition of breeding his own horse, saddling a champion and having a liveried chauffeur.

The Mail Box.

F. P., Warren, Pa., and G. F., Tiona, Pa.: You gents are right, of course, but sandlot teams don't always know the rules, much less follow them to the letter.

J. H., Burleson, Tex.: You can reach that party at No. 173 Riverside Drive, New York.

J. Y., Lonoke, Ark.: To date Feller has won 16 and lost 4. It's

MRS. JOE LOUIS SEEKS DIVORCE FROM CHAMPION

BY EARL HILLIGAN

Chicago, July 3—(AP)—Two weeks after a dinner for which she said "I cooked everything he liked in hopes we'd patch things up," Mrs. Joe Louis has filed suit for divorce from the world's heavyweight boxing champion. She alleged extreme and repeated cruelty.

In the action, filed yesterday in circuit court, she said the famous Brown Bomber dealt her "a violent blow in the mouth with his hand" on Jan. 2, 1941, and "hit her in the face and stepped on her ankle" April 19.

"We separated after that last incident," said Mrs. Louis, the former Marva Trotter of Chicago. "But two weeks ago we had dinner together. I fixed everything he

Goodyear Wingfoots Meet Morrison Crew Tomorrow Afternoon

Sports will hold the spotlight locally tomorrow in the observance and celebration of Independence Day. There'll be golf, a little tennis, swimming, etc., but the feature sports attraction will be the Akron Goodyear-National Forge baseball game at Wilder Field, Irvine, starting at two thirty o'clock tomorrow afternoon.

The Goodyears will bring a strong outfit to Irvine to match the Forge, and the Wingfoot club is fully as capable of giving the fans a fine baseball program as were the Warren, Ohio Ramblers, who put up two fine games against the Morrison aggregation last Sunday, according to reports and records from Ohio sources.

So for all baseball fans, it's easy and convenient to trek down to Irvine for the ball game. Unless bad weather forces postponement of the contest, it can be expected to be one of the finest games presented at Irvine this season.

Tentative lineups for both teams in tomorrow's fracas are as follows:

Akron Wingfoots: Captain Mel Rush, third base; Swope, first base; Bill McNenney, shortstop; Tom Porosky, center field; Paul Carroll, left field; Ike Harwell, right field; Jack Buttermore, catcher; Bus Simpson, second base or field; and their pitching ace, Carl "Lefty" Bement, who has won six and lost two in the Greater Cleveland League in which they play, and are currently leading the circuit.

ish Guiana and installations there are far from complete. The lack of base facilities below the bulge of Brazil in time of war would sharply restricet the range of U. S. naval or air activity and make it difficult to combat any major threat to the hemisphere developing in the south Atlantic.)

The United States reply to Uruguay's proposal, made public last night by the State Department, pointed out that the United States already has pledged itself to permit the other American republics to facilities and has provided practutilize all United States defense tical financial assistance to the other American nations to aid in strengthening the continent's defense.

After citing the "black night of fear and destruction and organized murder" which has engulfed Europe the American note declared that "no country, today, is secure from this unmasked lust for power and loot which has no limit but domination of the entire world.x x

"Constructive and far sighted action now on the part of all the American republics acting together will ensure the preservation for future generations of those liberties and other blessings which our forefathers so laboriously gained."

12TH VICTIM OF DON DISASTER RECOVERED

Harpswell, Me., July 3—(AP)—Casco Bay today gave up the 12th body from the cabin cruiser Don disaster, in which 35 excursionists apparently died.

The body was identified as that of Miss Leila Sanders, of Rumford, secretary to Paul Thurston, president of the Rumford Falls Trust Company. Coast guards recovered it off Cape Elizabeth.

The lifting of a fog that had hung over the area since the tragedy enabled a plane to join boats today in searching for the missing victims.

BUSY JUNE FOR CUPID

During the month of June, 54 couples applied for marriage licenses, it was revealed today at the register and recorder's office. This figure is between those of 1940 and 1939. In the '40 there were only 23 licenses issued; in '39, 85 couples were victims of Cupid.

RIDGWAY MAN DIES

R. A. Cartwright, 77, prominent Ridgway business man and former burgess and councilman, died yesterday. He was associated with lumber, brick, coal and chemical interests and was one of the first to prospect for silver and gold in Canada. The funeral will be held Saturday.

COMMITS SUICIDE

Clarion County Coroner R. W. Moore reported today that 17-year-old Helen Hughes ended her life yesterday on a farm near Knox after working several hours in a hay field. The girl fired a .38 caliber bullet into her heart after apparently firing the revolver twice to test it. Moore reported. Her body was found in an upstairs room of the farm home where she lived with her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Lovic Hughes, and several brothers and sisters.

MISSION OFFICERS

Rev. Gordon A. Nelson, of Jamestown, was chosen president of the Middle East Young People's Conference during the annual business session held yesterday at Chautauqua. Among others elected were Miss Alice Swanson, of Warren, as corresponding secretary. Much of the program for tomorrow will be patriotic in nature. Today's altar service was conducted by Rev. Levi Hagberg, of Sugar Grove.

Change in Training Act Urged

strictions affected the whole army.

Selectees, this official added, have been placed in units with regular army men, to whom the restrictions do not apply, thus making the entire unit subject to the restrictive legislation.

Only a comparatively few units are composed solidly of regular army personnel.

The chief of staff also reported that there were 120,000 men in overseas garrisons, "including Alaska and Newfoundland." No details were given on the distribution of these troops.

Marshall was emphatic on the removal of restrictions on military personnel.

"When and where these forces are to serve are questions to be determined by their commander-in-chief and the congress, and should not be confused with the problem of their readiness for service," Marshall told Stimson.

"All, it is believed, will admit that the time factor has been of dominant importance in the march of events since September, 1939, in the availability of material, in the effect of the complete readiness of huge, highly trained units for employment in chosen theaters."

Marshall asserted that the 12-month service period of many now on active duty is nearly completed and asked, "Must we replace most of the trained officer personnel of a division—the leaders—at the moment of departure for strategic localities?"

"I submit," Marshall said, "that the limitations referred to should be removed as quickly as possible if we are to have a fair opportunity to protect ourselves against the coldly calculated, secret and sudden action that might be directed against us."

The chief of staff also strongly urged immediate congressional action on legislation already before congress designed to vitalize the army leadership. He said the purpose was removal from active duty of "a few officers who slow down the development of our emergency army through lack of qualities of vigor and intelligent, aggressive leadership."

Summing up his recommendations, Marshall told Stimson:

"These proposals which the war department recommends for action by congress have but one purpose, the security of the American people; to permit the development of the national defense on the orderly and businesslike basis necessary if the dangers of the present situation are to be met. Such a purpose does not admit of delay."

icia, but were being thrown out after heavy battles. Appearance of Hungarians, marching through Carpathian mountain passes into Galicia, has made the Russian position more critical, these sources said.

On the Baltic front commentators said the Germans had crossed the Dvina river leaving broken parts of Russian forces behind hopelessly trying to break out of the Riga-Dvinsk-Tilsit triangle. This meant, the commentators said, that the most difficult terrain in that area had been overcome and Nazi forces were pouring into Estonia.

In the fourth German sector—Finland—the reported crossing of German and Finnish forces into Soviet Russia "shouldn't be underestimated," political circles said.

integrated into the present system by local boards on a proportional basis.

Governmental matters affecting conscription occupied the attention of the capitol to the exclusion of legislative and departmental matters today. The legislature was in recess until Monday and the capitol prepared to shut down by nightfall for the July 4 week-end.

Developments were:

Governor James asserted he believed some of the Democratic opposition in the assembly to his plan for a "little WPA" had dissipated and expressed the hope for a final budget agreement next week, looking toward adjournment of the 1941 session which started January 7.

The executive also said he has picked out a location for the new executive mansion "only a 35-cent cab fare" from downtown Harrisburg hotels. He made the disclosure after signing a bill authorizing the expense of the project.

Governor James said he would meet with Republican leaders of the legislature Monday in his office to discuss further steps in the legislature. Whether Democratic leaders would be invited has not been determined, he said.

PLAN MONUMENT TO HONOR LONGSTREET

Gettysburg, July 3.—(AP)—Two freshly-turned spades of earth high on a wind-swept ridge of this historic Civil War battleground marked the site today of a proposed $200,000 monument to the memory of Confederate General James Longstreet.

A one-time comrade at arms, 95-year-old General Julius S. Howell, of Bristol, Va., joined with Motion Picture Actress Mary Pickford in impressive dedication ceremonies on ground where Longstreet and his men fought fiercely 78 years ago.

With them yesterday was the general's widow, one of the principal figures in two days of events honoring the famed southerner. On hand also were representatives of President Roosevelt, the Navy Department, Governor Arthur H. James and a host of state and national dignitaries.

LIST HESITATES AFTER A RALLY

New York, July 3—(AP)—Stocks turned hesitant in today's market after an early extension of yesterday's mild rally by fractions.

A few aircrafts, steels, rails, farm implements and mail orders clung to modest advances, but minus signs were plentiful near the final hour. Numerous issues were unchanged. Dealings slowed after a fairly fast opening. Transfers were at the rate of about 450,000 shares.

Ickes Offers a New Idea About Conserving Gas

(From Page Six)

Meanwhile, the coordinator announced that Secretary of Navy Knox had agreed this morning to put two of the navy's largest and fastest tankers into service moving oil from the gulf coast to the east, in an effort to ease the predicted shortage.

Ickes met today with representatives of all government agencies having anything to do with petroleum.

He gave them a report on what was being done to relieve the transportation bottleneck on petroleum delivery.

Railroad shipment of crude oil to the east will begin Monday, Ickes announced, as an outgrowth of his plea for such deliveries to ease an expected oil shortage on the seaboard.

A train of 25 tank cars will leave Lima, Ohio, July 7 bound for the Bayonne, N. J., refinery of the Standard Oil Company of New Jersey, inaugurating regular shipments between supply and refining stations.

Former Y. M. C. A. Secretary Here Dies

Reading, July 3.—(AP)—Victim of a stroke, Herbert V. Elvidge, secretary of the Reading Y. M. C. A., and widely known civic leader, died today in Rearing hospital at the age of 70.

During his life, Elvidge conducted charity campaigns in which more than $10,000,000 was raised.

Elvidge came to Reading in 1920 from Allentown to take over the post of secretary of the Reading Chamber of Commerce. He had been general secretary of the Allentown Y. M. C. A. He also had been secretary of the Warren, Pa., Y. M. C. A.

Older residents will regret to learn of the passing of Mr. Elvidge who preceded A. F. Kottcamp as general secretary of the Warren Y. M. C. A., and after whom the Elvidge Class of the First Presbyterian church was named.

VETERAN BROADWAY PRODUCER IS DEAD

New York, July 3.—(AP)—Sam H. Harris, 69, one of Broadway's most successful theatrical managers and producers, died today at his hotel apartment.

The veteran producer, a native New Yorker, was thrown on his own resources when he was 11 and within six years had organized several entertainments. He was a partner in the theatrical firm of Sullivan, Harris and Woods before combining his talents with those of George M. Cohan, the actor. The latter association lasted from 1904 to 1920, and was resumed in 1936.

Harris had been ill since undergoing an appendectomy last March in Florida.

He was married to Mrs. Kathleen Brent Watson, sister of George Brent, motion picture actor, in March, 1939.

overnight. Officers said those who live in the Pittsburgh area probably would be permitted to spend part of the weekend at their homes.

General Martin himself is listed among the principal speakers at the Fort Necessity celebration.

Approximately 75 per cent of the camp's population will be granted leaves for the three-day weekend which begins after retreat ceremonies tonight, officers disclosed.

Meanwhile, the 28th division prepared to receive its second group of selective service replacements —800 infantrymen from Camp Croft, S. C.—Sunday.

Uruguay Proposal Endorsed

ish Guiana and installations there are far from complete. The lack of base facilities below the bulge of Brazil in time of war would sharply restricet the range of U. S. naval or air activity and make it difficult to combat any major threat to the hemisphere developing in the south Atlantic.)

The United States reply to Uruguay's proposal, made public last night by the State Department, pointed out that the United States already has pledged itself to permit the other American republics to facilities and has provided practutilize all United States defense tical financial assistance to the other American nations to aid in strengthening the continent's defense.

After citing the "black night of fear and destruction and organized murder" which has engulfed Europe the American note declared that "no country, today, is secure from this unmasked lust for power and loot which has no limit but domination of the entire world.x x

"Constructive and far sighted action now on the part of all the American republics acting together will ensure the preservation for future generations of those liberties and other blessings which our forefathers so laboriously gained."

12TH VICTIM OF DON DISASTER RECOVERED

Harpswell, Me., July 3—(AP)—Casco Bay today gave up the 12th body from the cabin cruiser Don disaster, in which 35 excursionists apparently died.

The body was identified as that of Miss Leila Sanders, of Rumford, secretary to Paul Thurston, president of the Rumford Falls Trust Company. Coast guards recovered it off Cape Elizabeth.

The lifting of a fog that had hung over the area since the tragedy enabled a plane to join boats today in searching for the missing victims.

During the month of June, 54 couples applied for marriage licenses, it was revealed today at the register and recorder's office. This figure is between those of 1940 and 1939. In the '40 there were only 23 licenses issued; in '39, 85 couples were victims of Cupid.

RIDGWAY MAN DIES

R. A. Cartwright, 77, prominent Ridgway business man and former burgess and councilman, died yesterday. He was associated with lumber, brick, coal and chemical interests and was one of the first to prospect for silver and gold in Canada. The funeral will be held Saturday.

COMMITS SUICIDE

Clarion County Coroner R. W. Moore reported today that 17-year-old Helen Hughes ended her life yesterday on a farm near Knox after working several hours in a hay field. The girl fired a .38 caliber bullet into her heart after apparently firing the revolver twice to test it, Moore reported. Her body was found in an upstairs room of the farm home where she lived with her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Lovic Hughes, and several brothers and sisters.

MISSION OFFICERS

Rev. Gordon A. Nelson, of Jamestown, was chosen president of the Middle East Young People's Conference during the annual business session held yesterday at Chautauqua. Among others elected were Miss Alice Swanson, of Warren, as corresponding secretary. Much of the program for tomorrow will be patriotic in nature. Today's altar service was conducted by Rev. Levi Hagberg, of Sugar Grove.

Change in Training Act Urged

strictions affected the whole army.

Selectees, this official added, have been placed in units with regular army men, to whom the restrictions do not apply, thus making the entire unit subject to the restrictive legislation.

Only a comparatively few units are composed solidly of regular army personnel.

The chief of staff also reported that there were 120,000 men in overseas garrisons, "including Alaska and Newfoundland." No details were given on the distribution of these troops.

Marshall was emphatic on the removal of restrictions on military personnel.

"When and where these forces are to serve are questions to be determined by their commander-in-chief and the congress, and should not be confused with the problem of their readiness for service," Marshall told Stimson.

"All, it is believed, will admit that the time factor has been of dominant importance in the march of events since September, 1939, in the availability of material, in the effect of the complete readiness of huge, highly trained units for employment in chosen theaters."

Marshall asserted that the 12-month service period of many now on active duty is nearly completed and asked, "Must we replace most of the trained officer personnel of a division—the leaders—at the moment of departure for strategic localities?"

"I submit," Marshall said, "that the limitations referred to should be removed as quickly as possible if we are to have a fair opportunity to protect ourselves against the coldly calculated, secret and sudden action that might be directed against us."

The chief of staff also strongly urged immediate congressional action on legislation already before congress designed to vitalize the army leadership. He said the purpose was removal from active duty of "a few officers who slow down the development of our emergency army through lack of qualities of vigor and intelligent, aggressive leadership."

Summing up his recommendations, Marshall told Stimson:

"These proposals which the war department recommends for action by congress have but one purpose, the security of the American people; to permit the development of the national defense on the orderly and businesslike basis necessary if the dangers of the present situation are to be met. Such a purpose does not admit of delay."

icia, but were being thrown out after heavy battles. Appearance of Hungarians, marching through Carpathian mountain passes into Galicia, has made the Russian position more critical, these sources said.

On the Baltic front commentators said the Germans had crossed the Dvina river leaving broken parts of Russian forces behind hopelessly trying to break out of the Riga-Dvinsk-Tilsit triangle. This meant, the commentators said, that the most difficult terrain in that area had been overcome and Nazi forces were pouring into Estonia.

In the fourth German sector—Finland—the reported crossing of German and Finnish forces into Soviet Russia "shouldn't be underestimated," political circles said.

integrated into the present system by local boards on a proportional basis.

Governmental matters affecting conscription occupied the attention of the capitol to the exclusion of legislative and departmental matters today. The legislature was in recess until Monday and the capitol prepared to shut down by nightfall for the July 4 week-end.

Developments were:

Governor James asserted he believed some of the Democratic opposition in the assembly to his plan for a "little WPA" had dissipated and expressed the hope for a final budget agreement next week, looking toward adjournment of the 1941 session which started January 7.

The executive also said he has picked out a location for the new executive mansion "only a 35-cent cab fare" from downtown Harrisburg hotels. He made the disclosure after signing a bill authorizing the expense of the project.

Governor James said he would meet with Republican leaders of the legislature Monday in his office to discuss further steps in the legislature. Whether Democratic leaders would be invited has not been determined, he said.

Authorities said the controversy would have to be placed before the social security board in Washington for a final decision.

PLAN MONUMENT TO HONOR LONGSTREET

Gettysburg, July 3.—(AP)—Two freshly-turned spades of earth high on a wind-swept ridge of this historic Civil War battleground marked the site today of a proposed $200,000 monument to the memory of Confederate General James Longstreet.

A one-time comrade at arms, 95-year-old General Julius S. Howell, of Bristol, Va., joined with Motion Picture Actress Mary Pickford in impressive dedication ceremonies on ground where Longstreet and his men fought fiercely 78 years ago.

With them yesterday was the general's widow, one of the principal figures in two days of events honoring the famed southerner. On hand also were representatives of President Roosevelt, the Navy Department, Governor Arthur H. James and a host of state and national dignitaries.

advance units had crossed the Berdeepest point of the German thrust into Russia proper, elaborated an earlier admission that the invaders had pushed about 80 miles beyond Minsk to Bobruisk.

Bobruisk is about 70 miles east of Slutsk which apparently is caught with Minsk, Borisov and Bobruisk in a fan-shaped offensive from the break-through at Baranowicze, in Poland near the old Russian border.

An earlier communique said that the German spearheads aimed at Moscow had been blocked in the Borisov-Slutsk-Bobruisk region.

LIST HESITATES AFTER A RALLY

New York, July 3—(AP)—Stocks turned hesitant in today's market after an early extension of yesterday's mild rally by fractions.

A few aircrafts, steels, rails, farm implements and mail orders clung to modest advances, but minus signs were plentiful near the final hour. Numerous issues were unchanged. Dealings slowed after a fairly fast opening. Transfers were at the rate of about 450,000 shares.

Ickes Offers a New Idea About Conserving Gas

(From Page Six)

Meanwhile, the coordinator announced that Secretary of Navy Knox had agreed this morning to put two of the navy's largest and fastest tankers into service moving oil from the gulf coast to the east, in an effort to ease the predicted shortage.

Ickes met today with representatives of all government agencies having anything to do with petroleum.

He gave them a report on what was being done to relieve the transportation bottleneck on petroleum delivery.

Railroad shipment of crude oil to the east will begin Monday, Ickes announced, as an outgrowth of his plea for such deliveries to ease an expected oil shortage on the seaboard.

A train of 25 tank cars will leave Lima, Ohio, July 7 bound for the Bayonne, N. J., refinery of the Standard Oil Company of New Jersey, inaugurating regular shipments between supply and refining stations.

Former Y. M. C. A. Secretary Here Dies

Reading, July 3.—(AP)—Victim of a stroke, Herbert V. Elvidge, secretary of the Reading Y. M. C. A., and widely known civic leader, died today in Rearing hospital at the age of 70.

During his life, Elvidge conducted charity campaigns in which more than $10,000,000 was raised.

Elvidge came to Reading in 1920 from Allentown to take over the post of secretary of the Reading Chamber of Commerce. He had been general secretary of the Allentown Y. M. C. A. He also had been secretary of the Warren, Pa., Y. M. C. A.

Older residents will regret to learn of the passing of Mr. Elvidge who preceded A. F. Kottcamp as general secretary of the Warren Y. M. C. A., and after whom the Elvidge Class of the First Presbyterian church was named.

VETERAN BROADWAY PRODUCER IS DEAD

New York, July 3.—(AP)—Sam H. Harris, 69, one of Broadway's most successful theatrical managers and producers, died today at his hotel apartment.

The veteran producer, a native New Yorker, was thrown on his own resources when he was 11 and within six years had organized several entertainments. He was a partner in the theatrical firm of Sullivan, Harris and Woods before combining his talents with those of George M. Cohan, the actor. The latter association lasted from 1904 to 1920, and was resumed in 1936.

Harris had been ill since undergoing an appendectomy last March in Florida.

He was married to Mrs. Kathleen Brent Watson, sister of George Brent, motion picture actor, in March, 1939.

General Martin himself is listed among the principal speakers at the Fort Necessity celebration.

Approximately 75 per cent of the camp's population will be granted leaves for the three-day weekend which begins after retreat ceremonies tonight, officers disclosed.

Meanwhile, the 28th division prepared to receive its second group of selective service replacements —800 infantrymen from Camp Croft, S. C.—Sunday.

WITH OUR BOYS AT INDIANTOWN GAP

By Special Correspondence

Well, here it is time for another article and I think that this should be, by all means, dedicated to old man summer, because he really is letting us know what heat really is like and if it gets any hotter than it is right now I don't know what this soldier is going to do. The water has been running freely for the last several days and I don't mean a creek, either. It has been so hot that the fellows aren't even sleeping between sheets. They just lie on top of their bunks and suffer. Oh well, we are able to take it and regardless of how hot it gets, we will still be going strong at the end of our year down here and I don't think there will be any casualties; at least I hope not.

Last Thursday we all went through the gas school and it really is quite a sensation to know that you are really smelling the real McCoy and not some make believe gas that won't hurt you. We were all given a chance to go through the various gases in a group and they exploded a small cartridge of the gas and we would all walk through it until we got a smell of it and then you were instructed to run out of it holding your breath and after getting a safe distance from the gas concentration, you could take a deep breath, or breathe regularly again.

The different gases we were put through were as follows: A diluted form of chlorpicrin gas, Lewisite gas and mustard gas. Then we were given a full strength shot of phosgene gas. The reason for this was that this gas will lift and mix with the air so very quickly that it is impossible to get even a slight concentration of it unless given in full strength. There are some of the strangest smells connected with these various gases that I ever did smell and it is without doubt the first whiff of the most deadly of the poison gases used today that the fellows ever had.

Well, another field inspection was held and as usual the men in the organization were all in top notch shape and their equipment was very good except in a very few cases and then it was nothing serious. We hope the boys will keep right on going at the rate they are going now because it really is becoming to the company and it also shows that they still have the old fight in them that they had when they first came down here; only now it has settled down to one of determination rather than of a rookie learning new ways of life. (Apologies to the older men of the company and to those of the outfit who were up on all of these things before we came here.)

There will be fifteen men from the company in Warren this week on seven-day furlough, including yours truly. The following list of men who will be home may aid those who may wish to see them while they are in Warren.

Those on furlough now are: Sgt. William Olson, Cpl. Bernard H. Roth, Cpl. Elmer E. Springer, Cpl. Orvis E. Kinch, Cpl. Leroy C. Fronberry and Privates Forest L. Curtis, Joseph J. Cooper, William W. CanSile, William R. Brown, Kenneth W. Dunn, Robert S. Ferry, Charles E. Hopkins, Tony P. Spear, George H. Franklin and David F. Ferry.

We hope that all of the folks who wish to see these boys can do so while they are home because it really does seem good to be back among you for seven whole days and just live like you want to again (sleep in every morning).

If you see some of the boys wearing civilian clothes, don't get excited and think they have been kicked out of the service or have run away because we have received permission from the officers to wear our civilian clothes if we wish to do so.

I have been asked several times in letters who it is that writes these articles for the paper. Well, I will tell you that he is just a line corporal who has a few spare moments, and the lieutenant and I have gotten together and are writing these little articles, but as to the identity, I will let you figure that one out for yourself and if you guess right it will be O. K. by me. I'll be home on furlough this week and any suggestions you may have will be accepted gladly (if you can guess who I am). (Editor's note—If you can't guess, we will be glad to forward the suggestions.)

Our schedule this week consists mainly of inspection by brigade and general brushing up on the things we have been instructed in for so long and it will be quite a hectic week because these inspections are not exactly fun, as the fellows who have been in the service or are in the service know only too well.

Here is the full schedule for the week:

Monday—Tactics of a platoon, tactics of a company.

Tuesday—Tactics of a platoon, individual infantry soldier, tactics of a squad, technique of fire, tactics of a squad and platoon.

Wednesday—Brigade training inspection (see paragraph below), tactics of a company.

Thursday—Field exercises.

Saturday—Regular inspection.

Rainy days—Individual soldier, tactics of a company.

I referred above to the 56th Brigade inspection. This is not a competitive inspection, but will be to find out how much the men as individuals have acquired during their training thus far. The inspection will consist of the following subjects for rifle companies:

1. Tactical training of the infantry soldier—scouting and patrolling, comoflauge, selection of firing positions, mental and physical mobility.

2. Technique of fire—range estimation, fire discipline, target designature, fire control.

3. Tactics of the rifle squad—formations, speed of action, use of scouts, service of security.

4. Rifle platoon in attack (weapons section attached)—orders, control by leaders, reconnaissance, use of weapons carriers, deployment.

This will give you an idea of what the average soldier of today must know and be able to execute before he is considered trained and a capable fighting man. You can see by this that the army really is no soft job, but one of alertness and good judgment.

This being a rather hot day and your reporter not having so very much energy, this little news article will have to come to an end. In closing, again I say, don't forget those letters.

METZGER-WRIGHT CO

Around New York

By GEORGE TUCKER

NEW YORK—One of the tokens of a changing world is the absence of the French motif in Broadway night clubs and the swift rise of Latin and Hawaiian music in recent seasons.

Five years ago the Follies Bergere was the central theme. There was the Casino de Paree of Billy Rose and the French Casino of Clifford C. Fischer.

Fischer, widely experienced as a producer of the Parisian type of entertainment, had spent many years in European capitals and had under his personal contract many of the personalities who gained fame in the Follies Bergere of Paris. His productions in New York were extravagant and pretentious. He went to untold lengths to obtain what he wanted. The result was a period of high French decor on Broadway.

It cannot have been a coincidence that the French note began to wane with the Spanish Civil War and the gathering of war clouds over Europe. Tourist agencies, quick to drive home the advantages of the slogan, "See America First," created a demand for Latin entertainment of all kinds.

Smash Success

The Spanish note at once manifested itself in the night clubs of the Village, of Broadway and of all the boroughs. Today, with one or two exceptions, the major clubs all feature dual orchestras—one American, the other Latin. . . . Today the most popular songs, as expressed by the voice of polls and by the Hit Parade, are sprinkled with tunes that have a Cuban, an Argentine and a south-of-the-border smack.

There are close to a hundred thousand Cubans in New York alone, and of this number a generous proportion are musicians.

They sponsored the Tango, the Rhumba, the Conga and the old South American Way. Today, it is not extravagant to say that the majority of the people who patronize night clubs in New York prefer Latin music and entertainment to any other

Another strong note in the contemporary scene has been the rise of Hawaiian dancing, music, and entertainment in recent years. The stronghold of Hawaiian entertainment in New York is the Hawaiia Room of the Hotel Lexington, where Ray Kinney's orchestra and Lani McIntire's orchestra have alternately played for the last four years.

Good Neighbor Policy

The South Seas theme has been further expanded on Broadway and its environs by other clubs, such as the Hurricane and the Beachcomber, so that today the twang of steel guitars and the swish of hula skirts is commonplace in the night life of the city.

This preference for Latin and Hawaiian entertainment has been vividly reflected on the Broadway stages, where the more elaborate of the reviews and crazy-quilt shows have featured South American and Hawaiian entertainers.

In sum, the war has brought the Americas closer together, even in their play. If it were true that the First World War was won on the fields of Eton, is it fantastic to wonder if the second might be won in the Conga Lines of New York?

(Tomorrow: 'Bank Night' at a Night Club.)

By GEORGE TUCKER

NEW YORK—What bingo is to the movies, free champagne is to the night clubs.

The managers themselves will tell you: "We don't play bingo. We give away a few bottles of wine now and then, but it's just in fun."

Phooey.

They give it away because it helps trade. At least, they think it helps trade. Night club managers are not noted for their altruistic instincts. They are business men in a business that is one of the most hazardous of all gambles. When the trade falls off, they face trouble. The overhead keeps going.

So, one of the things they do, caluculated to make the customer want to come back, is cater to the old bingo theme—the idea of giving away something for nothing.

Greenback Rain

Mr. Sherman Billingsley, shrewd, astute owner of the Stork Club, does better than champagne. He gives away $100 bank notes.

It works like this. Mr. Billingsley has several hundred balloons inflated, and into some of these he places his $100 bank notes. These balloons are suspended from the ceiling. At a given signal they begin to float down, and the scramble begins. To date there have been no broken bones, but the shrill cries of triumph from the lucky misses have often been heard as far as the Triborough bridge.

The champagne gesture can be worked a hundred ways and it has been popular since the nadir of the depression. Usually it is awarded as a prize, perhaps for the best dancers.

There's a night club in Greenwich Village that gives wine for lucky requests to the orchestra. Suppose there are 200 guests. Perhaps a number of guests will request a popular song. The seventh to ask for it is awarded the champagne.

Soothing Syrup

In still another club the entertainers summon stooges from the audience. They engage the victims in some form of competition, make them appear ridiculous, and then assuage their feelings with gift bottles of vintage champagne.

It isn't a bad feature at all. It's something to talk about—and people do talk. But, what is more important, they often go back and take their friends.

That's the idea—To get 'em back.

It's legitimate—and it's fun. But it's also bingo.

likes, but it just didn't work out.

"Joe and I are very friendly, really we are," she said, smiling. "We got along beautifully up to the first of the year. But Joe was just too busy for a family life—or at least he used that as an excuse. I guess his business just wasn't conducive to making a home."

Mrs. Louis, 24, asked restoration of her maiden name and temporary alimony. Informed of the suit, Louis appeared stunned, denied striking his wife, but said he would not contest the action.

He said they had had differences arising over her insistence that she accompany him to training camps and on exhibition tours.

They were married in New York Sept. 24, 1935, the night Joe knocked out Max Baer.

The divorce bill said Louis' annual income from fighting was $250,000 and that he owned real estate here and in Detroit, securities and insurance aggregating $800,000.

Point Barrow, Alaska, is the northernmost habitation on the North American continent. In the past 10 years, its population has increased from 330 to 363.

The oldest European-settled city in the United States, St. Augustine, Fla., recently celebrated its 375th anniversary.

DECLARATION SIDELIGHTS

Philadelphia, July 4, 1776—Richard Henry Lee, who introduced the resolution of independence, wasn't here to vote for its passage or for the adoption of the declaration. He was called to his home in Virginia several days ago because of the illness of his wife.

Benjamin Franklin is the oldest delegate to the Congress which tonight approved the Declaration of Independence. Dr. Franklin is past 70 but looks and acts like a man in his late fifties.

Youngest member of the Congress is South Carolina's Edward Rutledge, who is 26. He is a lawyer who spent four years in study at Temple court, London. Also 26, but three months older than Rutledge, is Thomas Lynch, jr., of South Carolina. Lynch likewise is a lawyer and was educated at Eton and the University of Cambridge before completing law studies at Temple court.

In the first ballot on the Independence Resolution, the colony of Delaware, with only two members present, was divided. Whereupon Delegate Caesar Rodney rode his horse 80 miles through a thunderstorm in a posthaste journey from his Delaware home to turn the vote of that colony for the resolution.

The bell which prematurely proclaimed the adoption of the declaration was cast in London in 1752 and brought to Philadelphia and recast in this city in 1753, when the inscription, "Proclaim liberty throughout the world" was placed upon it.

Members of the Independence congress repreesnt many vocations. Twenty-four are lawyers, fourteen are agriculturists, nine are merchants, four are physicians, one is a minister of the gospel and one is a manufacturer.

NEW OFFICERS OF SHEFFIELD ROTARY SEATED

Sheffield, July 3—Installation of the following new staff of officers occurred at this week's meeting of the Rotary Club, held Tuesday noon in American Legion Home: Glenn Belknap, president; Rev. Ivan E. Rossell, vice president; Dr. J. A. Allen, treasurer; L. B. Jones, secretary. Rev. Rossell will serve also as program chairman.

The secretary's annual report was submitted, but due to the absence of former treasurer, Chris Yutze, who is employed out of town, the treasurer's report will not be given until the next meeting.

Elmore Carlson, local young man who is a Lutheran divinity student, was a guest of the club. He favored with a vocal solo, Miss Josephine Benson playing the accompaniment.

The next meeting of the club will be held in the Home Cottage, West Main street, new restaurant which is being opened by Mrs. Anna Byrne. It will be the club's regular meeting place for the next several months.

INSTALL SERVICE

For the past several days a line crew of the Pennsylvania Electric Company has been employed in Sheffield installing poles and equipment by which the utility company will extend its service to the homes along Keystone avenue and the three Mill streets, which heretofore have received their electricity from the Central Pennsylvania Lumber Company power plant.

During the past year, the lumber company, which owned the houses, has sold them to the occupants. With the mill shutting down permanently this week it no longer will supply electric service. Hence, the installation of service by the public utility firm.

Over 100 meters have been installed as part of the changeover project, which included also the setting of 42 poles and the stringing of approximately 32,000 feet of wire. Estimated cost is $7,704.

M. J. Sisk, of Warren, is in charge of the project.

Applications must be filed with the Commission's Washington office by July 21, 1941.

Persons who were not placed on employment registers as a result of the previous examinations for these positions, which closed June 30, 1941, are urged to apply at once under the terms of the new announcement. Applications will be accepted until June 30, 1942. College study in naval architecture or marine engineering, and professional experience in this work are ordinarily required; however, provision is made for the substitution of additional experience for education, and for the substitution of shipyard experience for the prescribed professional architectural or engineering experience.

WITH OUR BOYS AT INDIANTOWN GAP

By Special Correspondence

Well, here it is time for another article and I think that this should be, by all means, dedicated to old man summer, because he really is letting us know what heat really is like and if it gets any hotter than it is right now I don't know what this soldier is going to do. The water has been running freely for the last several days and I don't mean a creek, either. It has been so hot that the fellows aren't even sleeping between sheets. They just lie on top of their bunks and suffer. Oh well, we are able to take it and regardless of how hot it gets, we will still be going strong at the end of our year down here and I don't think there will be any casualties; at least I hope not.

Last Thursday we all went through the gas school and it really is quite a sensation to know that you are really smelling the real McCoy and not some make believe gas that won't hurt you. We were all given a chance to go through the various gases in a group and they exploded a small cartridge of the gas and we would all walk through it until we got a smell of it and then you were instructed to run out of it holding your breath and after getting a safe distance from the gas concentration, you could take a deep breath, or breathe regularly again.

The different gases we were put through were as follows: A diluted form of chlorpicrin gas, Lewisite gas and mustard gas. Then we were given a full strength shot of phosgene gas. The reason for this was that this gas will lift and mix with the air so very quickly that it is impossible to get even a slight concentration of it unless given in full strength. There are some of the strangest smells connected with these various gases that I ever did smell and it is without doubt the first whiff of the most deadly of the poison gases used today that the fellows ever had.

Well, another field inspection was held and as usual the men in the organization were all in top notch shape and their equipment was very good except in a very few cases and then it was nothing serious. We hope the boys will keep right on going at the rate they are going now because it really is becoming to the company and it also shows that they still have the old fight in them that they had when they first came down here; only now it has settled down to one of determination rather than of a rookie learning new ways of life. (Apologies to the older men of the company and to those of the outfit who ware up on all of these things before we came here.)

There will be fifteen men from the company in Warren this week on seven-day furlough, including yours truly. The following list of men who will be home may aid those who may wish to see them while they are in Warren.

Those on furlough now are: Sgt. William Olson, Cpl. Bernard H. Roth, Cpl. Elmer E. Springer, Cpl. Orvis E. Kinch, Cpl. Leroy C. Fronberry and Privates Forest L. Curtis, Joseph J. Cooper, William W. CanSile, William R. Brown, Kenneth W. Dunn, Robert S. Ferry, Charles E. Hopkins, Tony P. Spear, George H. Franklin and David F. Ferry.

We hope that all of the folks who wish to see these boys can do so while they are home because it really does seem good to be back among you for seven whole days and just live like you want to again (sleep in every morning).

If you see some of the boys wearing civilian clothes, don't get excited and think they have been kicked out of the service or have run away because we have received permission from the officers to wear our civilian clothes if we wish to do so.

I have been asked several times in letters who it is that writes these articles for the paper. Well, I will tell you that he is just a line corporal who has a few spare moments, and the lieutenant and I have gotten together and are writing these little articles, but as to the identity, I will let you figure that one out for yourself and if you guess right it will be O. K. by me. I'll be home on furlough this week and any suggestions you may have will be accepted gladly (if you can guess who I am). (Editor's note—If you can't guess, we will be glad to forward the suggestions.)

Our schedule this week consists mainly of inspection by brigade and general brushing up on the things we have been instructed in for so long and it will be quite a hectic week because these inspections are not exactly fun, as the fellows who have been in the service or are in the service know only too well.

Here is the full schedule for the week:

Monday—Tactics of a platoon, tactics of a company.

Tuesday—Tactics of a platoon, individual infantry soldier, tactics of a squad, technique of fire, tactics of a squad and platoon.

Wednesday—Brigade training inspection (see paragraph below), tactics of a company.

Thursday—Field exercises.

Saturday—Regular inspection.

Rainy days—Individual soldier, tactics of a company.

I referred above to the 56th Brigade inspection. This is not a competitive inspection, but will be to find out how much the men as individuals have acquired during their training thus far. The inspection will consist of the following subjects for rifle companies:

1. Tactical training of the infantry soldier—scouting and patrolling, comoflauge, selection of firing positions, mental and physical mobility.

2. Technique of fire—range estimation, fire discipline, target designature, fire control.

3. Tactics of the rifle squad—formations, speed of action, use of scouts, service of security.

4. Rifle platoon in attack (weapons section attached)—orders, control by leaders, reconnaissance, use of weapons carriers, deployment.

This will give you an idea of what the average soldier of today must know and be able to execute before he is considered trained and a capable fighting man. You can see by this that the army really is no soft job, but one of alertness and good judgment.

This being a rather hot day and your reporter not having so very much energy, this little news article will have to come to an end. In closing, again I say, don't forget those letters.

METZGER-WRIGHT CO

Around New York

By GEORGE TUCKER

NEW YORK—One of the tokens of a changing world is the absence of the French motif in Broadway night clubs and the swift rise of Latin and Hawaiian music in recent seasons.

Five years ago the Follies Bergere was the central theme. There was the Casino de Paree of Billy Rose and the French Casino of Clifford C. Fischer.

Fischer, widely experienced as a producer of the Parisian type of entertainment, had spent many years in European capitals and had under his personal contract many of the personalities who gained fame in the Follies Bergere of Paris. His productions in New York were extravagant and pretentious. He went to untold lengths to obtain what he wanted. The result was a period of high French decor on Broadway.

It cannot have been a coincidence that the French note began to wane with the Spanish Civil War and the gathering of war clouds over Europe. Tourist agencies, quick to drive home the advantages of the slogan, "See America First," created a demand for Latin entertainment of all kinds.

Smash Success

The Spanish note at once manifested itself in the night clubs of the Village, of Broadway and of all the boroughs. Today, with one or two exceptions, the major clubs all feature dual orchestras—one American, the other Latin. . . . Today the most popular songs, as expressed by the voice of polls and by the Hit Parade, are sprinkled with tunes that have a Cuban, an Argentine and a south-of-the-border smack.

There are close to a hundred thousand Cubans in New York alone, and of this number a generous proportion are musicians.

They sponsored the Tango, the Rhumba, the Conga and the old South American Way. Today, it is not extravagant to say that the majority of the people who patronize night clubs in New York prefer Latin music and entertainment to any other

Another strong note in the contemporary scene has been the rise of Hawaiian dancing, music, and entertainment in recent years. The stronghold of Hawaiian entertainment in New York is the Hawaiia Room of the Hotel Lexington, where Ray Kinney's orchestra and Lani McIntire's orchestra have alternately played for the last four years.

Good Neighbor Policy

The South Seas theme has been further expanded on Broadway and its environs by other clubs, such as the Hurricane and the Beachcomber, so that today the twang of steel guitars and the swish of hula skirts is commonplace in the night life of the city.

This preference for Latin and Hawaiian entertainment has been vividly reflected on the Broadway stages, where the more elaborate of the reviews and crazy-quilt shows have featured South American and Hawaiian entertainers.

In sum, the war has brought the Americas closer together, even in their play. If it were true that the First World War was won on the fields of Eton, is it fantastic to wonder if the second might be won in the Conga Lines of New York?

(Tomorrow: 'Bank Night' at a Night Club.)

By GEORGE TUCKER

NEW YORK—What bingo is to the movies, free champagne is to the night clubs.

The managers themselves will tell you: "We don't play bingo. We give away a few bottles of wine now and then, but it's just in fun."

Phooey.

They give it away because it helps trade. At least, they think it helps trade. Night club managers are not noted for their altruistic instincts. They are business men in a business that is one of the most hazardous of all gambles. When the trade falls off, they face trouble. The overhead keeps going.

So, one of the things they do, caluculated to make the customer want to come back, is cater to the old bingo theme—the idea of giving away something for nothing.

Greenback Rain

Mr. Sherman Billingsley, shrewd, astute owner of the Stork Club, does better than champagne. He gives away $100 bank notes.

It works like this. Mr. Billingsley has several hundred balloons inflated, and into some of these he places his $100 bank notes. These balloons are suspended from the ceiling. At a given signal they begin to float down, and the scramble begins. To date there have been no broken bones, but the shrill cries of triumph from the lucky misses have often been heard as far as the Triborough bridge.

The champagne gesture can be worked a hundred ways and it has been popular since the nadir of the depression. Usually it is awarded as a prize, perhaps for the best dancers.

There's a night club in Greenwich Village that gives wine for lucky requests to the orchestra. Suppose there are 200 guests. Perhaps a number of guests will request a popular song. The seventh to ask for it is awarded the champagne.

Soothing Syrup

In still another club the entertainers summon stooges from the audience. They engage the victims in some form of competition, make them appear ridiculous, and then assuage their feelings with gift bottles of vintage champagne.

It isn't a bad feature at all. It's something to talk about—and people do talk. But, what is more important, they often go back and take their friends.

That's the idea—To get 'em back.

It's legitimate—and it's fun. But it's also bingo

likes, but it just didn't work out.

"Joe and I are very friendly, really we are," she said, smiling. "We got along beautifully up to the first of the year. But Joe was just too busy for a family life—or at least he used that as an excuse. I guess his business just wasn't conducive to making a home."

Mrs. Louis, 24, asked restoration of her maiden name and temporary alimony. Informed of the suit, Louis appeared stunned, denied striking his wife, but said he would not contest the action.

He said they had had differences arising over her insistence that she accompany him to training camps and on exhibition tours.

They were married in New York Sept. 24, 1935, the night Joe knocked out Max Baer.

The divorce bill said Louis' annual income from fighting was $250,000 and that he owned real estate here and in Detroit, securities and insurance aggregating $800,000.

DECLARATION SIDELIGHTS

Philadelphia, July 4, 1776—Richard Henry Lee, who introduced the resolution of independence, wasn't here to vote for its passage or for the adoption of the declaration. He was called to his home in Virginia several days ago because of the illness of his wife.

Benjamin Franklin is the oldest delegate to the Congress which tonight approved the Declaration of Independence. Dr. Franklin is past 70 but looks and acts like a man in his late fifties.

Youngest member of the Congress is South Carolina's Edward Rutledge, who is 26. He is a lawyer who spent four years in study at Temple court, London. Also 26, but three months older than Rutledge, is Thomas Lynch, jr., of South Carolina. Lynch likewise is a lawyer and was educated at Eton and the University of Cambridge before completing law studies at Temple court.

In the first ballot on the Independence Resolution, the colony of Delaware, with only two members present, was divided. Whereupon Delegate Caesar Rodney rode his horse 80 miles through a thunderstorm in a posthaste journey from his Delaware home to turn the vote of that colony for the resolution.

The bell which prematurely proclaimed the adoption of the declaration was cast in London in 1752 and brought to Philadelphia and recast in this city in 1753, when the inscription, "Proclaim liberty throughout the world" was placed upon it.

Members of the Independence congress repreesnt many vocations. Twenty-four are lawyers, fourteen are agriculturists, nine are merchants, four are physicians, one is a minister of the gospel and one is a manufacturer.

NEW OFFICERS OF SHEFFIELD ROTARY SEATED

Sheffield, July 3—Installation of the following new staff of officers occurred at this week's meeting of the Rotary Club, held Tuesday noon in American Legion Home: Glenn Belknap, president; Rev. Ivan E. Rossell, vice president; Dr. J. A. Allen, treasurer; L. B. Jones, secretary. Rev. Rossell will serve also as program chairman.

The secretary's annual report was submitted, but due to the absence of former treasurer, Chris Yutze, who is employed out of town, the treasurer's report will not be given until the next meeting.

Elmore Carlson, local young man who is a Lutheran divinity student, was a guest of the club. He favored with a vocal solo, Miss Josephine Benson playing the accompaniment.

The next meeting of the club will be held in the Home Cottage, West Main street, new restaurant which is being opened by Mrs. Anna Byrne. It will be the club's regular meeting place for the next several months.

INSTALL SERVICE

For the past several days a line crew of the Pennsylvania Electric Company has been employed in Sheffield installing poles and equipment by which the utility company will extend its service to the homes along Keystone avenue and the three Mill streets, which heretofore have received their electricity from the Central Pennsylvania Lumber Company power plant.

During the past year, the lumber company, which owned the houses, has sold them to the occupants. With the mill shutting down permanently this week it no longer will supply electric service. Hence, the installation of service by the public utility firm.

Over 100 meters have been installed as part of the changeover project, which included also the setting of 42 poles and the stringing of approximately 32,000 feet of wire. Estimated cost is $7,704.

M. J. Sisk, of Warren, is in charge of the project.
